Who was Meant. MR. EDITOR-As you were present at the Gospel Temperance Meeting on Sunday evening it will not require many words to convince you that the World was misled by his reporter in respect to what I said regarding the press. I did not even mention or make any allusion to the "Women's Christian Union." I said that among the discouragements were even occasional sneers from the press at the efforts of Temperance people to enforce the Scott Act. Had I been explicit I would have said that in announcing to its readers that an Inspector was looking up evivailing, produced such a pleasant after, noon as will ever be remembered by the little ones.

Gladstone.

Mellowed by long experience, shineth brightly, His noble intellect; and his great years

And labours, seem to fall on him but lightly, Undaunted, in his zeal, by selfish fears, Of life decining; in the Council hall f Britain's greatest, he is chief of all. He has not, alway, kept one path before him. In obstinate resolve, that path to tread: Persistent in his aim, there has came o'er him Full many a change, nor has he been afraid To own, and act upon the clearer view

Proud Dagon Prejudice -God speed his scheming Nor are his measures only vaporous dreaming.
What other can avail to draw away
The sense of strong injustice, and disgrace —
Erra! deep-rooted in thine injured race. Noble, warm-hearted, yet most erring, surely, Their Celtic fires so of to frenzy fanned. That it is doubtful they shall dwell securely, Even when their native rulers rule the land? O! may the gl-dsom; light of peace and love Over thy soms be shed from heaven above.

In Brief, And To The Point.
