Miss Warner Gave Splendid Lecture

Large Audience at German Street Institute Last Evening Thrilled by Description of Soldiers in France.

"The High School Alumnus has often had the privilege of introducing to St. John audience good speakers, but this is the first time we have had the pleasure of presenting one of our own." It was with these words that Miss Jessie Lawson, president of the St. John High School Alumnus, presented Nursing Sister Agnes Warner, infirmarian Major F. F. N. C., to a very large audience which completely filled the German street institute last evening. Miss Dorothy Bayard played "The Marseillaise" when Miss Warner entered the room, and Miss Louise Knecht sang one verse very beautifully.

Miss Lawson spoke of the fact that the Alumnus has on its Honor Roll some 400 names of pupils who had answered to the call, among them thirty girls, including Katherine Travis, Margaret Parks, Edith Hegan, Margaret Hare and Agnes Warner.

WORKING OF GERMAN MIND REVEALED BY FINANCIER
High Placed German Official by an Interview Endeavors to Sharpen the Wits of German Industrialists on Domestic and Foreign Policy.

By Joseph G. Saxe.
Berlin, April 7.—The following are extracts from a letter written by a highly placed German government official to the head of a large industrial concern in Rhineland Westphalia. It is intended to sharpen the wits of the German "industrialists" concerning the pending issues of domestic and foreign policy. At the same time it reveals the working of the German official mind and may be taken in the main to represent the views of the present German government. The letter, which is dated Berlin, April 7.—

"The work of the national assembly will drag on longer than was originally anticipated. This is due partly to the question of the German Austrian union and partly to the peace question. According to announcements from one of our countries, the latter question is to be considerably expedited. For to Mr. Wilson the European method of negotiation appears very slow and non-American. His employers want to see quick results and fresh possibilities of economic expansion, while in England and in France the spirit of the German 'industrialists' is to be considerably expedited. In more than one sense the soldiers seem to have a mind to raise the cry of 'home'."

"In a previous letter I referred to the struggle between France, too, is looking with covetous eyes towards Byzantium. She openly favors the Greek claims in the same direction, so as to have in Mr. Venizelos France's trustee on the Golden Horn and to extend her far-reaching economic protectorate over the whole Balkans. For instance, if France accepts the invitation to the Prinkipo conference, as he seems inclined to do, and if any arrangements are arrived at between Moscow and London, then they will be made at the expense of France, whose press is unable to disseminate its anxiety over the British move. In order to get as much as possible out of the Russia, John Bull would even be prepared to recognize the Soviets, which financially are at work in their teeth at a government power, while France in her anxiety about her Russian loans can only support the opponents of the Soviets. It would be clever tactics for the men in Moscow to accept the British invitation and to appear as a government fit to negotiate and recognized by the leading great power. The significance of this event for us is obvious. We should regard it as a fresh proof that America and England change their method of combating Bolshevism in no longer shunning direct contact with its strings. This issue is not in itself of a desperate character in England, though the temper of the masses there is exceedingly critical. Moreover, this British action is undoubtedly partly inspired by solicitude for Poland, Hungary and—for Germany. We shall soon see whether it brings us any relief.
