Intelligence has just been received of the death of Dr. Livingstone in the interior of Africa. Died of Dysentery. His body has been enbalmed and is being conveyed to England by way of Zanziber.

Disraeli in an address to his constituents in Buckinghamshire seeking reelection to Parliament, strongly condemns the action of the Ministry in inaugurating the Ashantee war. He also claims it would have been far better for the country if within the last twenty-five years the foreign policy of the government had been a little more energetic. Disraeli characterized the arguments for the extension of household suffrage to countles as fallacions and says no one has more strongly opposed the contemplated assimilation of the Franchise than the Premier.

commencing as soon as the Court opened. He first thoroughly reviewed the evidence of the prosecutrix, Jane McCarthy, which he characterized as one of the strangest stories ever told. He thought that the jury, from the evidence of the prosecution alone, should clear his client. That such an abominable crime as that charged against the prisoner had been committed was hardly to be believed.

A range or an assault of the kind.

MR. James I. Fellows.—Dear Sir: I consider it my duty to inform you of the great benefit I have received from the use of your Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites. I have been, for the last nine years, a great sufferer from Bronchitis and Asthma, at times so ill that for weeks I could neither the down or take any nourishment of consequence, and during the time suffering intensely. I have had, at different times, the advice of twenty-two physicians. ncing as soon as the Court oper been committed was hardly to be believed.

A rape or an assault of the kind set forth is not committed in daylight, or, what is the same, under the bright moonlight. The place, from the young woman's own evidence, under the very windows of a respectable house, and on a thoroughfare where people were passing all the time, was not such a one as would be selected for such a crime. The way in which the assault was alleged to have been carried on was too incredible for belief. The various weak points in the girl's testimony were pointed out and commented on by the Counsel. From the evidence he could draw two theories; one that she is one of those peculiarly constituted persons who sometimes imagine such hings to have happened to them; the other that she had been larking with some one on the road who had not made after passing Miller's, when, perhaps, she and, whoever he was-not certainly the er-he had taken some liberties,

He reviewed the testimony produced for the defence, and claimed that a perfect alibi had been proven by a number of witnesses. His speech occupied two honrs, and was an able, critical and powerful appeal to the jury for his client. The Attorney General, about 12.30, commenced his address. He commented on the evidence produced by the Crown, and asked two questions. Was the person who committed the assault? On that of Jane McCarthy, the prosecutrix, question of identity he claimed that the evidence of the woman on this point was In his own honse, and lastly when the prisoner stood up in Court, she had positively sworn to his being the man.

Frosty weather must be opposed to drunkenness judging by the record of life work. It is to be hoped that the re-cords he made of his discoveries have rests at all last night, and the court room looked deserted this morning.

ving in search of him must have discovered Benjamin Horton, who was at the stahis remains and undertaken to hear tion for protection, and warned by the Magistrate not to be there again put in a socond appearance this morning. "You'll go to the penitentiary for two months, and get out about Spring, in time to get to sea again. It is a better place to go than to gaol, where you'd be put in a small room. There you'll have a chance to move round, work, and lots of good soup, meat, bread, coffee, pork, &c., will be supplied you." The poor fellow's eyes danced with pleasure as the Magistrate recounted to him the good things that should be supplied him at the Dominion
