THE FACE me of the most striking portions of the emendous figure are in view upon the ground around the pedestal. The giant face ground around the penessal. The giant lace is set up in a sort of frame, and looks toward the visitor as he and the masquitoes proceed up the little path toward the works. Our artist is at once sketcher and photographer, as ndeed most artists are getting to be nowadays. He took photographs of the views here given, and then made the newspaper drawings of them. The comparative size of the minty face can be seen by the insignificance of the full grown man who stands in front. It is a solendid face, majestic and mysterious as that of a sphinx, beautiful as that of a Greek goadess. It is plainly an that of a Greek goadess. It is plainly an Exputian face, straight browed and feep agreement of the full grown modeled and feep and the way, that Bartholdi modeled acid a greek when he was 5 years old the children are selected where he was one day began throwing lime at each other during recess, a piece struck little Walter in the eye and cut a deep gash. He lost his sight from the accident.

The wonder is how it could be made at once so rigantic and so beautiful.

Only for the demonish mosquitoes, Liberty island would not be a bad place. The air sweeps up the bay from the real sea when the wind is right. In it there is a smell of salt and sea weed which is like a magic draught to a weary invalid. It is only at intervals that one can catch that rare sea smell so near New York city. The weed itself lies in heaps all about the seaward sincre of the legal profession at the Harvard Law school.

Up to about ten years ago army officers and soldiers lived here. There is a tiny graveyard in the southern part, shaded by a great, splendid weeping willow. There are Some of the legal profession at the has been lawyer, editor and business man. He writes with his own hands by means of grooved paper. He was a music teacher a while. He received his early education at the institutions for the blind at Columbus, Ohio, and at Philadelphia. Later he attended the Western Reserve college, in Ohio, and graduated there. He afterward studied for the legal profession at the Harvard Law school.

great statue is to stand.

The pedestal is star-shaped, just as the fort was. The island rises out of the water like a high mound. A sea well runs around it, in some places fifteen feet high. Below are ragged rocks and the sea. A little walk about two feet wide runs around the top of the wall. Because you know that if you would fall off you would be drowned at high tide or fracture your skull at low tide, you are immediately seized with an irresistble desire to run around the top of that wall.

Most people do it. You can go all around the island in fifteen minutes.

From Youngstown, O., comes the story of a blind man, who is as remarkable in his way as the late Peter Fawcett, the British postmaster general was. The careers of both show what a man can do who has a determined will, though he is deprived of the first and great and set of the first and great act of the first ac the first and greatest of the five senses.

The wonder is how it could be made at once accident.
