A Lost City on Mountain Top
Machu Picchu, Inca Stronghold, Commanded World View

(Harry A. Franck in July Century)

"The Incas, using the world broadly, showed an extraordinary liking for building on spots where they had an unbroken outlook over all the surrounding world. Lovers of nature, perhaps, though the apparent complete indifference of their descendants to its charms and moods makes this debatable, they were above all practical fellows, moved less by esthetic reasons than by an overwhelming dislike to being awakened from the afternoon siesta by a well-aimed boulder. Yet had their only quest been unrivaled situations, that of Machu Picchu could scarcely have been improved upon. Mere words and pictures give faint idea of the unique charm of the place. The earth offers few such views as that from the intihuatana at the top of the town.

"The altitude of the city is put at 8,500 feet and that of the river 6,500 yet it is surprising how clearly, if hushed, the roar of the river comes unbrokenly up the two thousand sheer feet to the invulnerable city. Utterly unpeopled, the visible world is one tumbled mass of gigantic forest-clad mountains rolling away to inaccessible distance—blue rangiers rising afar off to snow-capped crests mingled with the sky; not the haggard and sterile Andes of elsewhere, but softened forms so densely wooded that nowhere is a spot of earth visible. Swing round the circle, and on the other side the gaze falls as precipitously into the Urbubamba. Three great blue ranges rise one behind the other, growing from blue to purple farth off, the central Cordilleras shutting off all the world beyond, seemingly near at hand, yet only a week of hard travel would attain it. In another direction the rolling ranges, faded to purple, die enticingly away one behind another into the great Montana and the region of the Amazon, while masses of pure, white clouds come majestically up out of Brazil beyond."

STEAMSHIP BRUSSELS TAKEN INTO ZEEBRUGGE

LONDON, July 2.—The British Brussels, with passengers on board, has been captured by German destroyers and taken into Zeebrugge. Announcement of the capture of the Brussels, which belongs to the Great Eastern Railway Company, was made today by officials of the line here. The vessel was on her way from Rotterdam to Tilbury, on the Thames, with passengers and mails. It is stated there were no Americans on board. The Brussels was captured yesterday. She is a 285 foot vessel, 1,300 tons gross, and was built in 1902. The route from Rotterdam to Tilbury lies across the southern end of the North Sea on a line which passes about 40 miles north-east of Zeebrugge. The German destroyers probably set forth from Zeebrugge. Most of the passengers on the Brussels were Belgian refugees on their way to England.
