COLORED AFRICAN

LABOR USED IN WAR All British Natives Are Represented in Valuable

Sir Herbert finds that the native companies are representative of almost every aboriginal tribe in South Africa. In the ranks are Zulus, Fingoes Galkas, Tembus, Basutos, Matabele, Pondos and Bechuana, as well as natives from Portuguese Africa. The officers were almost entirely composed of members of the South African Native Department, or of retired officials possessing a lifelong experience among South African natives.

African Native Superiority

As workers, the natives appear to have been happily thought of by the departmental officers under whom they were emplayed. It was the general estimate of officers of the royal
