LIOW I MARRIED Ďioioioioioioioioioioioi

It was five years ago. The affair began then, but before I say any more let me recall to your mind the fact that I was always regarded in the family as my grandfather's heir. The title and entailed estate would go, of course, to his eldest son, my uncle, but the greater part of his vast wealth would come to me. In fact, he had so declared. I had lost both parents when but a child, and I had grown to manbood under his immediate care, for he had long been a widower. My father had been his favorite son. What more natural than that I should be the preferred one? There was this under-standing, however, between my grandfather and myself: I must never marry without his approval. Marry! I had no thought of it. My rollicking bach-A soldier who had just enlisted was placed on guard over a cannon. It was not long before he abandoned his post elor life pleased me too well to ex-

Well, a girl's face, nothing more—a girl's face seen for a brief moment only at a window as I was changing carriages at Bolton station. You smile. I don't wender, but I declare to you that from thenceforth I knew no peace of mind. That face was ever before me, looking out from under a dainty gypsy hat, pale, pure, perfect in outline, with a luxuriant mass of soft brown hair full of shiny ripples, dark eyes, a little red mouth and shining white teeth. "Some dreamy little chit," I said to myself again and again, "with a pretty face and a head full of romance. I wish I had never seen her. At all events, it is highly probable that we have met for the first and last time; so

To this I received no answer, but a month after my arrival in India I read the announcement of the baronet's death, and the same paper contained his marriage notice. A letter from his solicitors explained the mystery. Great Britain ...... 59,030,000,000 My grandfather had been severely

"Moreover," wrote the lawyer, "by your grandfather's will you inherit something above £50,000, provided you consent to marry the lady with whom he went through the ceremony of marriage on his deathbed. Otherwise you receive not a penny of his fortune." Had the man gone mad? Marry my grandmother? For, word it as they might, the ugly fact was still there-nized by food experts and physicians as the only true health food for young and old. It possesses all the important virtues that are lacking in other prepared breakfast foods. It is partially cooked and credimented therefore the woman was my grandmother. Bristling with indignation, I wrote to Sir John's lawyer-not very civilly, I fear, but very energetically, I am sure. "And say to my grandmother," I added, "that the world is wide enough and there are men enough in it for her to seek whom she may devour elsewhere and not among those whom the law of the land now declares to be her own kith and kin. Let her cast her eyes among the strangers at her gates and not upon her grandson!" That ended the matter, and I was troubled with no more letters about it. Two years afterward I returned to England on leave, and then fate, in the person of General Ashland, led me down to Surrey for a fortnight's shoot-

So, as you may guess, my two weeks at Ashland Park wore on to four, and I still lingered, even until the dying leaves were rustling feebly in the mellow air of a belated autumn.

And one clear, starlit evening, when Helen and I were sauntering among the trim flower beds that were cut in the soft green turf of the terrace, I told her the secret of my heart-its hope, its fear, its sweet unrest.

When I ceased, my companion looked up at me wonderingly, and, upon my honor, tears were glistening in her pretty eyes.
"What!" she said. "Are you sure?

Do you love me-me? Oh, Colonel Halbrooke, how could you? Indeed, it cannot-cannot be!" "Because your heart is given elsewhere, I suppose? But, Helen, I cannot let you go from me! I love you! Oh, my darling, how shall I live all the long weary years of my life without "Hush!" she cried sharply. "Sir, do you know-do you know who I am?" "Indeed, yes! The sweetest little girl in the wide world!" "No, sir, I am not. Colonel Halbrooke, I am your grandmother!" My grandmother! Talk of sudden shocks after that, won't you? I tried to speak, but my voice failed me. I reached out my hands and touched her. Yes, she was there, real enough, and I was not dreaming.

"Tell me all!" I gasped. And standing there by the broad stone coping she told me all-how her parents had died when she was little more than an infant, and Sir John, her guardian, had watched over her with jealous care; always keeping her at school, however, until he brought her home to The Towers, a young lady. She had heard of me. She knew all about her guardian's intentions and my persistent refusal to see her. And when Sir John lay dying and appealed to her to marry him, in order to secure certain property which would otherwise pass to the next of kin she consented. "Not for myself, Colonel Halbrooke," she continued, "for I inherited a fortune, but for you. The property has been sold, according to instructions, and the money coming from the sale is yours. Sir John wished you to take it. He often said that your allowance was paltry compared with what should have been yours and would have been, too, had your father not left so many debts behind him." "You are privileged to speak as you please about my father." I murmured. "Were he living, you would be his mother." "Don't be ridiculous, sir?" cried her ladyship sharply. "And if you are trying to mortify me you may as well understand that you cannot succeed. I meant to do right, and I regret nothing that I have done. I did not know anything of your grandfather's foolish wishes about us until his will was read." "Do I understand that the money is really mine, Helen?" "Yes; all yours." "Well, I want it."

"You shall have it. Never fear. But are you so frightfully in debt?" asked my companion in a low, awed whisper, her big eyes full of gentlest sorrow. "In debt? Thank heaven, no! But I can receive nothing from you unless you give yourself to me also."

"Would you marry you

Then a smile like the full sunshine wreathed my darling's perfect lips, and -and-well, to me that prim old terrace became then simply Eden, a garden of all delights.

She is my wife now. I like my family far too well to think of marrying out of it.

Cardinal Newman. A friend of Cardinal Newman says in The Cornhill that that eminent man spent every day from 9 to 2 or 3 o'clock in his study. "He always kept on his table the edition of Gibbon, with the notes of Guizot and Milman, Dollinger's 'Heidenthum und Judenthum;' almost always the copy of 'Athanasius which had belonged to Bossuet and which contained in the margin notes in the handwriting of the great bishopthe 'last of the fathers,' as Newman delighted to call him. Newman had also always near at hand some Greek poet or philosopher. "Talking to me one day about Greek thinkers, he said - and I believe he has mentioned it to others-that he owed little or nothing intellectually to any Latin writer, with one exception. The exception was not St. Augustine, Cicero. He always maintained that he owed his marvelous style to the persistent study of Cicero. This will strike, no doubt, many people as most strange. St. Augustine, one would think, would have appealed to Newman, and his Latin was more pictur esque than that of Cicero. "Again, authorities say that Newman wrote better English than Cicero Latn. Nevertheless he constantly insisted on his obligations to the great Roman statesman." Black Days. In the calendar of the nations there are quite a number of "black" days. "Black Monday" was April 14, 1360, a day so dark and cold that many of the army of Edward III., king of England, which lay before the city of Paris, were frozen to death. An immense bush fire occurred on "Black Thursday" in Australia, Feb. 6, 1851. Two orated by "Black events are comme Friday" in England-Dec. 6, 1755, when the news reached England that the pretender had arrived at Derby, and May 11, 1866, when the failure of Overland, Gurney & Co. brought on a most disastrous panie. A panie in New York occurred Sept. 25, 1869, which was afterward known as "Black Friday." "Black Saturday" is the name applied to Aug. 4, 1621, when a great storm occurred at the time parliame was sitting to enforce episcopacy upon

Every breach of the laws of bodily bealth produces physical damage which eventually damages in some way the mental bealth.—Herbert

A lazy liver may only be a tired liver, or a starved liver. A stick is all right for the back of a lazy man. But it would be a savage as well as a stupid thing to beat a weary man of a starving man because he lagged in his work. So in treating the lagging liver it is a great mistake to lash it with drastic drugs. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred a torpid or sluggish liver is but a symptom of an ill-nourished body, whose organs are weary with overwork. Let your liver alone. Start with the stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nu-trition. Put them in proper working order, and see how quickly your liv-er will become active and energetic. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has made many marvellous cures of "liver trouble" by its wonderful control of the organs of digestion and nutrition. It restores the normal activ ity of the stomach, increases the se-cretions of the blood-making glands, cleanses the system from poisonous accumulations, and so relieves the liver of the burdens imposed upon it by the defection of other organs. Charity must never become a tax; unless there are in it the sweetness and tenderness of free impulse and hu-man inclination it loses its value and
