If You Have to Fight a Boa. If any reader of this article should ever be so unfortunate as to experience the embrace of a boa constrictor, it is recommended that he try to release himself by taking hold of the creature's tail and unwinding it from that end. It can be easily unwound in that way, but otherwise it is not possible. The way to kill a snake is not to attempt to crush its head, the bones of which are very hard, but to strike the tail, where the spinal cord is but thinly against any hard substance, and the eel quickly dies. The boas are not venomous, but their fangs are sufficiently powerful to inflict serious wounds.

we had to let it fly away when we left. I'm sleepy, but you can't tire me. No, sir. We had to sleep on the quilt last night, in the room at the station, and I just couldn't sleep. These poor little children had been on the train traveling steadily, under great hardships, for eleven days, and yet the mountain peaks, a colt in a meadow, a flock of wild ducks, and the ice on the little lakes interested them keenly. Ice, of course, is rather scarce in Oklahoma. Other settlers had stories largely of the same sort. Growing families and no room to spread out at home; reports from friends who had settied in Alberta as to the fine opportunities for mixed farming and the crop results of last year. They were bound all up the line, a little knot dropping off at each station. The most intense interest was displayed in the country through which passed. The judgment was frank and Too much alkali there for decided. "I have had enough of bare is I want trees." That is prairie; I want trees." In the year 1848 William Sinclair was chief factor of Hudson Bay Company at Norway House, then known as Rossville. When Her Majesty's Sixth Regiment left the shores of the Red River for England they returned by way of Mudson Bay, and spent some considerable time Norway House, and there Montague William Darling, deputy commanding general of the forces on Her Majesty's staff, fell in love with pretty Margaret Sinclair, the factor's daughter. Before the vessel sailed the marriage was solemnized and Margaret left her far northern home for England. Nothing seems to have been heard of the young couple until this winter; when word was received at Norway House from Margaret Darling, now a widow, asking for copy of her marriage certificate file with the War Office in order that she might receive her widow's pension. Her letter was dated from Boulogne, France, and stated that husband died in South Africa year. Rev. J. Semmons, Indian agent for the Berens River district, procured the certificate asked for, which shows that the witnesses the marriage were P. Robertson, surgeon, Sixth Regiment; William Sinclair, chief factor of the Hudson Bay Company at Norway House, and Sophia Mason. The officiating minister was Rev. William Mason, one of the missionaries who may

WIRE WOUNDS.

My mare, a very valuable one, was badly bruised and cut by being caught in a wire fence. Some of the wounds would not heal, although I tried many different medicines. Dr. Bell advised me to use MINARD'S LINIMENT, di-luted at first, then stronger as the sores began to look better, until, after three weeks, the sores have healed, and best of all, the hair is growing well, and is not white, as is most always the case in horse wounds.

Of course "Bush" was taxed with deception at the evening camp-fire. Not the ghost of a smile or of a blush haunted his countenance. "You susplicioned my veracity when I was telling and yet you wanted engospel truth, an' yet you wanted en-tertainment, an' you got it, didn't you?" This was the only explanation

"Right you are, 'Bush,'" said Mr. Ketch, K.C. "Still, you might have Ketch, K.C. The Bird-Gee, you oughter known etter than to swallow a porcupine. Queer Facts About Orch

THE life of an orchid hunter combines in itself all the most sensational features of exploration in untrodden districts, often infested ferocious beasts and by even more savage natives, and in many cases highly malarious and disease laden. The rarer orchids are generally found in the most inaccessible spots, and in the densest and most marshy jungles. Even the natives avoid the districts into which the intrepid orchid hunter penetrates in search of his floral quar-

A few years ago eight orchid hunters et at Tamatave, and then separated n search of specimens. Within a year only one of them survived, and he had spent months in the most pestilential swamps, from which he emerged with his health permanently impaired. One of the others had been captured by native priests, who drenched him with oil and burned him to death on their altar. The expense of collecting the orchids and getting them at last into the salesroom is very great. For example, a fine orchid is found in a very out of the way part of Colombia. After being gathered the plants are wired to sticks and nailed inside boxes. These boxes are conveyed on a journey of several days to Bogota, whence another six where they are placed on rafts and conveyed down the Magdalena River to Savanilla-a fortnight's journey where the steamer is awaited. When at last, after a heavy outlay, the consignment reaches England, quite half the specimens will be dead, and in many cases the whole of them will be too far gone for recovery. heavy losses. Twenty - seven thousand valuable plants were sent home on one occasion rom Colombia by Mr. Roezl, and of these only two survived the voyage They were sold for 40 guineas each-not a high price when one considers what they had cost.

Until the plant flowers its value is purely speculative. Its species is in most cases readily determined, but it may present some variation which will greatly enhance its value. For example, a certain orchid with a purple bloom may be worth about five shillings, but an example of the same species with white flowers will realize £100 at auction. The value of a plant depends upon its rarity and novelty even more than upon its beauty.

Many years ago an orohid, of quite new and unknown species, arrived in the packing in which some foreign plants were sent home. No one knew where it came from, and for a long while it continued unique. Orchid hunters sought everywhere for it, but not till seventy years later was it
