Frenchmen's Veteran Player is Suffering From an Attack of Flu.

Toronto, Feb. 22.—St. Patrick's hope of winning the National Hockey League championship received a terrible jolt on Saturday night, when the Ottawa Senators beat them five to three and assumed the leadership in the race.

The visitors had the edge on the St. Patrick's throughout and won the game, strictly on their merits. They are now out in front in the second of the race by one game, and it will require herculean efforts on the part of the local team to give the St. Patrick's a chance to figure in the playoff.

M'LEAN IMPRESSES AN OTTAWA EXPERT

But little is known here so far of how Fred McLean, the local hockey player, is making out with the Quebec team in the National Hockey League since he went from Cape Breton to the Ancient Capital for a tryout in the "big show."

The Canadian Press, after sending out the news to the papers of the Maritime Provinces that the big fellow had joined the Quebec team, let the matter rest there, and the stories which came through last night of the Bulldogs' unexpected victory over the Canadiens didn't even mention whether the Maritime player had been used or not.

The Montreal Star, in a story of the mid-week game played by Quebec in Ottawa written by Tommy Gorman, the noted Ottawa expert, referred to McLean's work in that game, saying: "McLean, Quebec's new player from the East, shapes up like a find."
