The Jesuits in Bengal.
It is now some time since we laid before our readers certain details relative to the progress of the Jesuit mission at Chota-Nagpore, Bengal.
During the interval the good work of propagating the faith has been going forward with even greater strides than before. The eighteen new missionaries sent out at the end of last year have been put in harness and are now giving great help to their brethren who were unable to do one-tenth of the work offered by God's signal mercy. The Vicar General of the Diocese of Calcutta, Father Grosjean, informs us that the lowest calculation 55,000 converts were made in less than two years. "If God's Providence has blessed so signally the labors of a handful of missionaries," he writes, "it might be not hope for if we read more? Here are to be seen the most glorious achievements of our old missions of Paraguay and Guiana."
On November 14th and 15th Father Motet wrote from Ranehee: God be praised for His infinitesimal mercies, Father Lenoir went last month into the district of Barwa, nearly 100 miles west of this. No priest had ever before appeared there. The people crowded round the messenger from heaven in hundreds, say in thousands.
The missionaries came down in great numbers from their forest homes here in hand, their arrows tuck in their hair, to be instructed and baptized. A few extracts from Father Lenoir's short notes may interest our readers: "Jarsi, Oct-30th, 1889. I went to Patru-jip-3,400 feet above the sea level, at night it is quite cold. To day, since morning, I have baptized 1,575 people, men, women, and children.
They come to me in crowds, just as the people in Belgium on great fast days come to church. Nearly every one understands and knows the essentials of our religion and they show a great desire for baptism." Exchange.

A Memorable Day in the Church June 24th is set down in the Calendar of the Church in order to commemorate the Martyrs of Rome who suffered for the faith during the first persecution under Nero.
The Roman Emperor who persecuted to their death the innocent followers of our Blessed Redeemer.
The occasion which led to the terrible tortures and death of so many innocent victims was created by Nero himself, who, in the year 64, caused the city of Rome to be set on fire in different parts of the city. The fire spread so rapidly that it became impossible to quench the flames which bore destruction before them for nine days, destroying the greater portion of the city.

Kenna, Sir T. Mould, Dr. Kenny, Dr.
Tanner and Dr. Fitzgerald. On behalf of his colleagues, Mr. Sexton read the address, which eulogized His Eminence's services in the cause of religion and in the promotion of education and temperance, laid especial stress on his "memorable intervention between capital and labor" in the recent dock strike, and thanked him for his efforts to establish good will and peace between England and Ireland. The address was signed by Mr. Parrell and the whole of the Irish party.

Well, now, I remember saying to Cardinal Cullen some things which I do not think he liked (laughter).
I said to him that Ireland was never so much united in her people as it is at this day. Ireland has never been one people—one nation—as it is at this day. The Irish people never possessed, since the days of their confederation, so much of the soil of Ireland for their own as they do at this day. They never possessed so much since the days of their utter spoliation. There never was a public opinion in Ireland till this time.
There never were municipalities over the face of the country. There were never newspapers to teach the minds and the will of the people as at this time (hear, hear). Gentlemen has not Ireland advanced in every respect which can note true progress (hear, hear). More than that—there was ever a time when Ireland had east a harpoon into England as at this day? (hear, hear, and laughter).
You have a million of your people in England, and are they not the centre of industry? Have you not influence over all the English Press, both provincial and in London land, anything you ever had before? Have you not in the Imperial Parliament at this moment a representation that Ireland never had until this day? Is that true?
(applause). Then why should we be down-hearted? (hear, hear). I was under the gallery of the House of Commons when Mr. Gladstone introduced his two Bills. Now I am describing in Professor's book did not like his Home Rule, but I did like 150 millions of money (laughter) or I had not the slightest complaint or complaint, or complaint in taking that. I had three hundred years England has drained Ireland, and when any statesman thinks it fit to tilt the stream and turn back again what England can do for Ireland it ought to be done (hear, hear). I am an English tax-payer, and I should, therefore, have to pay my share (hear, hear). When Mr. Gladstone had finished his speech on the introduction of these bills I came out and I found myself surrounded by the Irish members. I do not know whether any persons present could read me, but I think it was Mr. O'Connor who asked me what I thought. I said, I think, this is substance—You have everything —I do not say in the form—as to the form, I know nothing, the form will take its shape hereafter, but the substance is inevitable, but I said, "not one of you must go away from Westminster (a laugh) I say that much as I think that it is of importance to our country. But my reason was this: it was an Imperial question, and not a foot of the Irish members must be lifted from the floor of the House of Commons (hear, hear). I do not know what you think, but that is what I think, and you would not think me an honest man if I did not say so (hear, hear). I do not know what I ought to go on much further in politics. I had a pleasant intercourse lately with Mr. William O'Brien—(applause)—whose absence I cannot regret, as he is much happier where he is; but I will say this; I do not know whether any of you have seen Punch and the fun it made of my letter as to Mr.
O'Brien's book; but I ought to tell you in a private letter beforehand, and Mr.
O'Brien asked me whether he might publish it. I said, "No; I will write you another letter which you may publish." (a laugh). The letter did write, you probably have seen and know about it. It was, as Punch said, "rather a sweet thing in criticism." I may say I never was more profoundly touched than I was at the conclusion of that book. I never thought anything more truly descriptive of the history and of the sorrows of Ireland than the conclusion of the book; and when I read that I said, "I cannot be a critic of this book, because I cannot think of anything but Ireland." (Applause). Every drop of my blood in England; but I may say this: I love England as a son of the soil. I do not love England for the present christianity of England. I love Ireland not only as a people that I hold to be infinitely better than I love England for its faith's sake, and I love it for the martyrdom which it has suffered. Well, now, perhaps I may leave that part of the subject. My present feeling is one of the most profound hope. (Hear, hear). I say at this moment—and I not only say it, but I feel it—that Ireland has entered into the most intimate and cordial union with the English people. (Hear, hear). I touch with my hand, and if I know anything, I know the people of England, and I know the working people of England, and I know that at this moment the best of the workingmen of England have turned to Ireland in true and profound sympathy.

A Cure for Drunkenness.
It would be most commendable on the part of the civil authorities in some of our American cities—like our own—for instance—where drunkenness greatly prevails, if they would try the Swedish system of care and report on its effect as a preventative of drunkenness. The Swedish American is our authority for saying that the habitual drunkard in Norway or Sweden renders himself liable to imprisonment for his love of strong drink, and during his incarceration he is required to make a man twice the treatment for the cure of his falling which is said to produce marvelous results. The plan consists in making the delinquent subsist entirely on bread and wine. The bread is steeped in a bowl of wine for an hour or more before the meal is served. The first day the habitual toper takes his food in this shape without resistance; the second day he finds it less agreeable to his palate; finally he positively loathes the sight of it.
Experience shows that a period of eight to ten days of this regimen is generally more than sufficient to make a man twice the greatest aversion to anything in the shape of wine. Many men after their incarceration become total abstainers. What a great reformation as public morals there would be if such a system was successful in California!—S. F. Monitor.
