BOVRIL IS ALL BEEF.

Questions we are often asked.

Q.—What is the sediment at the bottom of a cup of Bovril?
A.—That is a valuable portion of the nourishment, and should never be left.
Q.—Are you serious when you say that Bovril is more nourishing than ordinary Meat Extract or Home-made Beef Tea?
A.—Certainly! and we have for years offered large rewards to anyone who can prove the contrary.
Q.—But can you prove your statement?
A.—Yes—from the pen of Baron Liebig himself, who told the world that the man who managed to get the nourishing, as well as the stimulating properties of Beef in a liquid form, would produce something far better than Liebig's Extract, and would be a public benefactor.
Q.—And you have done this?
A.—Yes. By a special process, the entire nutritious constituents of prime ox beef are separately treated, pulverized and added to specially-prepared Meat Extract, and that is Bovril.

Don't experiment with artificial imitations of dubious quality (which are dear at any price) when such a tried and proven nutritious food-beverage "made in England" is within your reach.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

really is.

The investigator suggested that the husband should take his wife into his confidence on this subject. I have a further suggestion—and that is that he also give his children some idea of the family income and outgo.

I happened to hear some children the other day accusing their father of extravagance, because he did not seem to be able to keep out of debt. I am pretty sure those children did not know the father's income. I am very sure they did not have any idea what it cost to keep up the establishment of which they were a part. Now, if these young people had been taken into the father's confidence, admitted to the family financial council, made to understand more about what it costs to live, I feel sure that they would not only have known better than to make such cruel, unjust criticisms, but would have been willing to help their father keep expenses down.

In his father's absence, John, the fifteen-year-old son of a certain family, tends the furnace. Often he puts on more coal than is necessary, or forgets to close the draughts, thus wasting a great deal of fuel. He is sometimes scolded for this, but he knows that somehow or other father will buy more coal when this is gone, and the scoldings roll off of him as water from a duck's back, or rebukes from a fifteen-year-old boy's back always do. Now, if John were taken into the family council, shown just how much coal father has to buy in a winter and how much it costs, made to realize the relation of more coal to his father's salary, and to the possibility of a new suit for himself or a new hat for mother, I maintain that that would have more effect upon him, and make him more anxious to run the furnace economically, than many scoldings. It would arouse his pride and a sense of responsibility, and, believe me, these are stronger motives, even in a fifteen-year old boy, than many of us realize.

In like manner, if his sister Jane, who is eighteen, fond of fun, and hospitably eager to entertain continually, should be introduced to the weekly grocery and provision bills, and made to understand that fancy cakes and good meats and cream and grapefruit and all the good things she wants for her guests, may not be procured merely by lifting the receiver off the telephone, and then eaten and forgotten, but have an ugly way of appearing on the weekly bills and swelling them to painful proportions, she, too, might be a little more thoughtful.

Many of the children of to-day have absolutely no idea of the limits of the buying power of money, until they begin to earn it. It seems to me that we cannot better advance their education to develop their sense of responsibility and at the same time enlist their co-operation in the difficult task of making a limited income cover unlimited desires, than by taking them into the family confidence, showing them the family budget and frankly asking them to help us in this matter.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Is the best of all medicines for the cure of diseases, disorders and weaknesses peculiar to women. It is the only preparation of its kind devised by a regularly graduated physician—an experienced and skilled specialist in the diseases of women.

It is a safe medicine in any condition of the system. THE ONE REMEDY which contains no alcohol and no injurious habit-forming drugs and which creates no craving for such stimulants.

THE ONE REMEDY so good that its makers are not afraid to print its every ingredient on each outside bottle-wrapper and attest to the truthfulness of the same under oath.

It is sold by medicine dealers everywhere, and any dealer who hasn't it can get it. Don't take a substitute of unknown composition for this medicine of known composition. No counterfeit is as good as the genuine and the druggist who says something else is "just as good as Dr. Pierce's" is either mistaken or is trying to deceive you for his own selfish benefit. Such a man is not to be trusted. He is trading with your most priceless possession—your health—may be your life itself. See that you get what you ask for.

Household Notes.

Don't add the flavoring to soft custard until the custard is cold.

A slice of lemon stewed with prunes gives a most delightful flavor.

If meat for soup is cut into small pieces, more nutriment will be obtained.

When frying mush dip the slices first in white of egg. This makes them crisp.

To peel tomatoes without scalding, rub them backward with the blunt edge of a knife.

In selecting beef, the pieces which are well mottled with fat will be found the richest and juiciest.

For the roast of cold lamb course, serve an egg salad, sprinkled with minced mint leaves.

Clean the glass of pictures with whiting, as water is apt in time to mar the painting beneath.

When leather armchairs look shabby, they should be wiped off with a soft cloth, dipped in olive oil.

Wooden breadboards are kept in better condition by rubbing them with sand than by simply using soap.

In making bread, do not fill the pans over half full. Bread should rise to twice its size before baking.

Though steak should be chopped and mixed with diced potatoes, and then baked. Grated cheese over this dish improves the flavor.

Do not destroy any net from old curtains. Cut into squares of desired size and stitch together, and they will make excellent wash cloths.

A saucer of baked beans can be heated with catsup in a pan, and a spoonful on toasted crackers serves nicely for the noonday luncheon.

Be careful never to use too much butter in cake. Use a scant amount rather than what the rule calls for, and it will save many a poor cake.

When next frying oysters, dip them first in mayonnaise, and then in crumbs before immersing in the deep fat. They will be found delicious.

Don't handle the dough any more than necessary when making biscuits, doughnuts or cookies. The more you handle it the tougher it will become.

having a long neck, fill with clear, hot water and tiny bits of torn paper. Shake well and rinse in clear water. Cold water, a teaspoonful of ammonia and soap will remove machine grease when other means would not answer on account of colors running. If gilt frames are coated with copal varnish, it will preserve them, and they can be washed with water without removing the lustre from the gilt. A small piece of window glass is useful to hold the leaves of the cook-book apart, so that one can read a receipt and not soil the book by handling. When the eyes seem weak and watery, bathe them night and morning with a mild astringent, such as two grains of alum to two ounces of water.

A Romantic Marriage.

The following authenticated incident occurred in P. E. Island over 100 years ago. It illustrates the primitive simplicity of the manners and habits of the early settlers of this Province:

On a cold winter night a gentleman hitched his team at the gate of another man and went in to warm himself before crossing the Bay, a distance of nine miles. The team consisted of a yoke of oxen and sled and the animals were put up and fed. The driver was supplied with a good stiff glass of Scotch whiskey. Under the exhilarating influence of the draught he became very communicative and as a great secret told his host he was on his way to be married. After another drink or two the prospective groom was persuaded to lie down and rest and start early in the morning. He accepted of the invitation. No sooner had he gone to sleep when his host, who had matrimonial designs on the same lady, set off on the same journey, reached the home of the intended, proposed marriage and was accepted and the ceremony was performed. Shortly after the other person put in an appearance and was sorely grieved that his friend had stolen a march upon him. The bride's sister came along with a milk pail in hand, and talking in the situation said, "Why mon, what's the use of greetin', ain't I just as good as my sister? Will you ha' me?" The bargain was made and the minister got another fee.

The descendants of the two have filled honorable positions both in church and state in P. E. Island. They were also intelligent and highly respected. One of their descendants became an honored minister in Canada, two of them were successful missionaries in the foreign field, and two of them members of Parliament.—Windsor Tribune.

A pinch of salt will make the white of an egg beat quicker.

A pinch of borax in cooked starch will make the clothes stiffer and whiter.

Do not destroy any net from old curtains. Cut into squares of desired size and stitch together, and they will make excellent wash cloths.

Uncle Walt

THE POET PHILOSOPHER.

"There is no good in printers' ink," with emphasis says Jabez Dink. "I tried that graft for many years: it brought me bitterness and tears. Last summer I blew scads in droves announcing low priced heating stoves; such bargains as I offered then were never known by mortal men, and not a customer arose—I didn't sell a doggone stove! This winter I have tried once more to bring the people to my store; I advertised some useful wares—porch furniture and garden chairs, and didn't sell enough to pay the ad expenses for a day! To one great truth I'll put you wise—it doesn't pay to advertise!" But Gaffer Spink across the street, says advertising can't be beat. "I think of what the people need, and then write ads that they will read," says Gaffer Spink, who gets the dough, while rivals wring their hands in woe. "I don't cry 'fans!' when winter's nigh, or Christmas trees in mid-July!"

Gone to the Wall And Through It!

To meet the demands of our rapidly increasing business we are compelled to make extensive alterations to our store. To enable us to do this without inconveniencing our customers, we have decided to close our Store for 14 days.

When we have completed these alterations our Store will be second to none in the city. This will enable us to stock a larger range of Up-To-Date Gents' Furnishings, which up to the present we were unable to do, through lack of space.

We thank our numerous patrons for the excellent support they have given us since we started the K. & A. STORE, and hope that when we re-open that Bright little Store on the Corner, it will be just as popular as ever.

We remain, yours faithfully,

G. F. KEARNEY, J. M. ATKINSON.

OBITUARY.

There passed over to the Great Beyond in Brooklyn, New York, on the 26th January, William, second eldest son of the late Morgan Morrissey, in the 41st year of his age. About Christmas last the deceased contracted a heavy cold which later developed into pleurisy. Despite the best medical treatment and kind and skillful nursing, the young man after an unsuccessful fight with his insidious foe, breathed his last on the above mentioned date. Though dying far away from the land of his birth, and missing the maternal endearments of a fond parent in his own dear natal Isle, yet his last days were not devoid of that kindness and sympathy that go far to assuage the sadness and solemnity that naturally fill the chamber of the dying. During his illness his aunts and cousins were most attentive and untiring in their ministrations, and spared not themselves in the futile endeavours to save the life of their dear one. Ere his departure from the "vale of tears," he received the last Sacraments of the Catholic Church, together with all the sweet consolations that our Holy Mother—the Church—so lovingly lavishes upon her dying children. His end was peace. May his soul rest in peace.

The deceased young man was a native of Harbor Grace. After receiving a fairly good education he was apprenticed to the late Mr. Michael O'Flynn, cooper. When his time of apprenticeship was over, finding work in his trade none too brisk, he with his cousin, John Doherty, since deceased, left his native town in 1831 to seek more remunerative employment in the land of the Stars and Stripes. Up to the time of his illness he worked almost uninterruptedly at his trade. He liked well the country of his adoption and always took great interest in all and everything appertaining to its welfare. The love for the homeland was in no degree diminished by his lengthy residence in America. On the contrary, absence had but contributed to augment this attachment, for but a short while ago he expressed the intention of soon re-depositing his own dear Isle. God had disposed otherwise. He wished to take him to Himself. In lowly submission to that Divine ordinance he cheerfully acquiesced. He married Hannah, daughter of Mrs. P. Griffin, of this town, who predeceased him about three years ago. His funeral took place on Sunday, January 28th. The mortal remains of William Morrissey quietly rest in the land of his manhood years, awaiting the great resurrection day. The news of his death came as a great surprise to his aged mother; his sister, Mrs. J. Moore; his only living brother, Charles, and the family of Mrs. P. Griffin. The heartfelt sympathy of their many friends goes forth to them in this their sad hour of bereavement.—Com.
