MARRIAGE OF MISS MORISON AND DR. HOLMAN.

At the Presbyterian Church on Saturday afternoon, Miss Mary Morison, daughter of Hon. Donald Morison, was married to William Ludlow Holman, M.D., Bacteriologist at the University of Pittsburgh. Owing to the absence of the uncle of the bride, Rev. Ralph G. Strathie, M.A., through illness, the marriage knot was tied by the Rev. F. S. Coffin, of Harbor Grace. Among those present in the church was the Deputy Governor, Sir William Horwood, Lady Horwood, Lady Williams and Miss Dean. At 3 o'clock the bride entered the church, accompanied by her father. She was attired in a beautiful gown of white satin, embroidered with lace, with a nice wreath and veil. She carried a fine bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaids were Miss Holman, sister of the groom, and Miss Janet Miller, cousin of the bride. They wore gowns of white silk, trimmed with gold embroidery, and carried bouquets. The flower maids were Miss Jean Knowlton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Knowlton, Jr., and Miss Hope Grieve, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Grieve, who wore pretty white dresses trimmed with gold lace. Mr. R. Morison, brother of the bride, was the groom's man. At the close of the ceremony Lohengrin's Wedding March was played as the wedding party passed from the vestry along the aisle to the motors and carriages outside. A reception was held at Balsam Place. At 5.30 Dr. and Mrs. Holman left by automobile for Holyrood, whence they will join the cross-country train to-day and proceed to England via Quebec, where they will tour the Lake District. After the honeymoon they will take up their residence in Pittsburgh. The groom presented to the bride a cameo moonstone pendant; butterfly wing pendants to the bridesmaids, and gold lockets and charms to the flower girls. The happy husband and wife received many congratulations orally, by letter, telegraph and cable, and in these good wishes for a happy, prosperous and lengthy married life the Evening Telegram joins. Importance of Malta.

Special Evening Telegram.

MALTA, To-day.

The conference to decide Great Britain's future policy in the Mediterranean, which began here on May 29th, was concluded to-day. Among those who participated were Premier Asquith, Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, Viscount Kitchener and General Ian Hamilton. An official statement issued this evening says: "The Lords and Commissioners of the Admiralty having concluded the inspection of the Mediterranean fleet and naval establishments at Malta desire to express their satisfaction at the efficiency of the organization. Their intention is to make full use of the facilities of this important and complete naval base, the value of which to the British Navy is of a permanent character. They propose to assign such a proportion of the refitting and repairing work to the dockyard as will keep it in a normal condition of activity and capable at all times of attending to the needs of peace or war for the fleet cruising or operating in the Mediterranean. Submarines will play an increasingly important part in the defence of the island."

ROYAL SALUTE.—At noon to-day H. M. S. Sirius fired the usual birthday salute in honour of the King's birthday.

Champion Lazy Men.

County Clare Man Went to Bed at Ten and Got Up Twenty-Nine Years Later.

The "won't works" many of whose careers of laziness have been revealed in the police courts during recent years, have achieved some remarkable records of idleness, says a London paper; but the case of a gardener who recently committed suicide out of sheer disinclination to go on working is surely unique.

This man did not mind starting a job, but he could never be induced to finish it, and he reminds one of the man about whom the wife recently complained to the magistrate at Wood Green Police Court. She described her husband as a piece-worker, and it seemed that he only worked on Wednesday, when it was his custom to put in two hours' toil.

Another case was that of a man sentenced to three years' penal servitude for theft. His age was 40, and it was stated that he had only done one day's work in his life. This was during the taxicab strike, when he wheeled a barrow of luggage from Charing Cross to Euston.

There are at least half a dozen claimants to the title of the laziest man in England. A good first would be the lazy man at Tottenham. Although he found it impossible to sleep all the 24 hours of the day, he tried very hard.

He was practically dragged from his bed to the police court by his indignant wife, but he promptly went back to bed again when he had been lectured by the magistrate and had paid the penalty of his idleness.

Then there was the County Clare man, who went to bed when he was 10 and did not get up until he was 39. Then for some mysterious reason he began to get bored. He rose from his couch in 1907, took to the strenuous life, and was last heard of escorting a coal truck.

One man, brought up at the Willesden Police Court charged with sleeping out, actually fell asleep in the dock while the magistrate was pronouncing sentence.

Another man, who had not worked for so long that he had forgotten whether he was a gardener or a printer, when asked by the magistrate whether he had anything to say, replied with a drawl, "Hardly worth while," and disappeared with a yawn into the cells below.

Yet another case was that of the man of 59 who, when the policeman said he had never done a day's work in his life, protested indignantly that "he once did a bit of 'oppin'."

Chocolate as a Food.

Not so many years ago the drink called chocolate was thought to be a reckless dissipation for one who had regard for his or her stomach. To indulge in chocolate candy was quite as pernicious as to eat tomatoes, and with quite as much reason. Chocolate was an exotic and bizarre drink, told about travellers who had ventured into Mexico or Spain, but to-day it is even ordered in the sick room and, at least in the form of cocoa from which the fats have been removed, it is considered both digestible and nourishing.

What a difference the scientific study of dietetics has brought about. Sugar—that is, carbohydrates—is now acknowledged to be a normal part of human food; in certain circumstances, says the Bulletin of the Pan-American Union, a necessary part of it, and any way to get sugar into the system so that it will be agreeably assimilated is to help nature to accomplish her proper ends. The carbohydrates are the accessory ingredients supplying energy to the body above that which may be obtained from the proteins.

The harder the physical work an individual performs the more proteins must he eat, and up to a certain point the less sugar does he require; but in ordinary life the individual requires a dietetic mixture of proteins, fats and sweets, while under conditions in which muscular tissue has been rapidly exhausted sugar has the faculty of restoring energy quickly, and therefore of making the heavier foods accomplish better results.

The starchy foods, like potatoes, are useful in all dietaries, but when immediate results are sought, sugar must be used. Yet plain sugar in a dietary used to be a thing to be avoided, but the human animal and vegetable makes sugar so agreeable as a due proportion of chocolate added.

Capt. Edgar Hann, of Westleyville, came up on the Fogota. He will go in command of the Stella Maris, which will run the mail to the Labrador. The steamer leaves here on Wednesday and will, until the latter part of June, do fishery protection service on the French Shore. Magistrate Penny, of Carbonate, will go along on the ship. On her last trip for the season the Stella Maris will go to Baffin's Land.

The Song That Reached My Heart.

I sat amidst a mighty throng
Within a palace grand.
In a city far beyond the sea
In a distant foreign land.

I listened to the grandest strain
My ear had ever heard.
Enraptured, charmed, amazed I was,
My inmost soul was stirred.

I looked on the singer fair,
My heart was at her feet.
She sang of love, the old, old theme,
In accents low and sweet.

And then she sang another song
That made the teardrops start;
She sang a song, a song of home,
A song that reached my heart.

That night I shall never forget,
That night with its pleasure and pains.
I think of the singer I think of the song.
And I wish I could live it again.

In fancy again I recall
The scene with its splendour bright;
The mighty throng, the palace grand,
O, the memory of that night!

My fancy it may have been,
But never have I heard
A song that thrilled me o'er like this,
Like this so strangely stirred.

The memories of that night of bliss
Will never from me part.
She sang the song of "Home, Sweet
Home."

The song that reached my heart.
Chorus:
Home, home, sweet home.
She sang the song of "Home, Sweet
Home."
The song that reached my heart.

Fishery North.

From passengers by the S. S. Fogota we learn that the fishery north is exceptionally good and the catch landed to-date is far ahead of last year. At King's Cove and Twillingate fish are abundantly plentiful. There is also a good sign of fish at Westleyville. Capt. Jesse Winsor getting several quintals in his trip on Saturday. So far there is 2,000 qts. of fish landed at Seldom Come By.

The s.s. Montauk Point arrived at Liverpool on Saturday from here after a passage of 9 days.

The s.s. Nascopie passed the Narrows last night on her way to Botwood with a load of coal for Sydney. The s.s. Adventure is now due from Sydney.
