pleasure to have a letter friend differ from me and write a letter like the following:

"You say in this morning's paper: 'Almost all women are born symbolists. If more men would realize this fact we should have happier marriages.'"

"This is one of the instances where I disagree with you."

"If women were less given to symbolism we should have happier marriages."

"The trouble is that most young wives expect too much of their husbands. They want their husbands to be continually at their beck and call. They do not realize that their husbands work all day to keep up the home that they share their earnings with their wives and provide them with clothes and pay for their amusements. Of course this is at it should be. The wife in return looks after the house and her husband's welfare."

"But do not most wives—I am speaking of druggies,—find plenty of time during the day to enjoy themselves? Can they not go to luncheons, card parties and matinees with their friends? Have they not enough leisure, even if they do their own work, to receive friends, or to sit down for an hour to read a book?"

"Then why should not a husband be entitled to spend a free afternoon at the ball game or in a trap into the country with some friends?"

"I have a friend whose husband is a passionate huntsman. When they were engaged he said to her: 'There is something which I shall never give up, and that is my hunting. I go hunting or on a cross country tramp with some friends every Saturday and Sunday, and shall continue to do so after I am married. I hope you will not object to this.'"

"Being a sensible girl she said she would not mind, but would enjoy herself in her own way."

"They have been married over two years now and are the happiest couple I know of. My friend told me only the other day that they have never had a quarrel. Almost every week-end he goes on his hunting trips, she spends those days with relatives or friends, and when they come home Sunday evening they have lots of things to tell each other."

"Besides they often go out together and have many good times."

"Another young friend is just the opposite. She would not stand for anything like that. When he goes out she makes herself miserable by wondering whose company he prefers to hers. She is always feeling hurt over some imaginary neglect, and though they have hardly been married a year, they have already had many serious quarrels."

Which of these wives will make her marriage a success?

Household Notes.

Paint wooden pails and tubs with glycerine to prevent shrinking.

Rub mirrors with methylated spirits and polish with a touch of blue powder.

One tablespoonful of ammonia to a quart of water will clean gold or silver jewelry.

Place all cakes to cool on a wire sieve and never put them away in tins till perfectly cool.

Ordinary wallpapers may be cleaned with dough, or rubbed with a soft, clean flannel dipped in fine oatmeal.

Slices of lemon, topped with grated horseradish, make a tasty and pleasing garnish for meat served in any form.

Candles used for lighting the dinner table will not drip if placed on ice for two or three hours just before serving the meal.

Do not throw your worn-out hot-water bag away but cut it in round or oval pieces and use them as mats to put under flower pots.

Coffee stain, even with cream in it can be removed from the most delicate silk or woollen fabrics by brushing the spots with pure glycerine.

For dusting women's heavily trimmed hats the best brush is a cheap shaving brush, as it is both stiff and small enough to reach every crevice.

Fill a bottle with hot water, place the splinter over the mouth, press tightly; the suction will loosen it, and it will be an easy matter to remove it.

A simple way of repairing a rent in an umbrella is to use a piece of ordinary adhesive plaster. If the plaster is not black, it may be easily colored.

After shampooing blonde hair, half the juice of a lemon, squeezed in the last rinsing water, will cause the hair to dry more quickly and with less snarls.

Sew matting with raffia and prevent unsightly stitches of thread. Raffia is very strong, and may be bought to match almost any kind of matting.

When next creaming carrots, add half a teaspoonful of onion juice and a dash of grated nutmeg to the white sauce. Add the boiled diced carrots and serve.

Nails used in bathrooms and kitchens, on which damp cloths and towels may be hung, should be painted with enamel, so that they do not leave rusty marks.

There is a very important point in regard to making scallops. That is, after the scallop is made and cut out, go all over it again with a tiny bulb-hole slitch.

Instead of throwing away the unsalted envelopes that bring circulars cut off the gummed strips and save them. They will serve a hundred household uses.

If half a bottle of olives has been used, and you wish to keep the rest, add a pinch of salt to the brine, pour a teaspoonful of olive oil in the liquid and replace the cork.

A delicious filling for layer cake is made by mixing a pound of finely minced shelled almonds with two eggs, a cupful of confectioner's sugar and a teaspoonful of vanilla.

In making sauces, use clarified fat from the soup kettle as the medium for cooking the flour, then beat in a few tiny bits of butter to the finished sauce for the flavor.

When you need a cold cloth and haven't ice, try wringing a cloth out of cold water and shaking briskly in the air. The rapid evaporation will give you almost an ice-cold compress.

Sir William Wallace

This is the 60th anniversary of the death of Sir William Wallace, a Scottish hero who made several attempts to throw off the English yoke but only succeeded in dying at the age of 30. Sir William's death was very sudden and was the result of being drawn and quartered with great thoroughness and severity at the request of the English king, Edward, who sought by this means to curb his rebellious subjects. King Edward's experiment proved an entire success, as Sir William did not take any further part in the proceedings, owing to the royal policy of segregation then in force.

It is related of Sir William that he had a temper with the highest recorded voltage of the period. On one occasion, when a boy, a son of the English governor of the province made some derogatory remark with reference to the fit of Sir William's kilts, whereupon Sir William whipped him on the spot. It appears to have been a vital spot, as Sir William retired to the mountains and collected a band of Scottish patriots who also had considerable temper of their own.

King Edward was much put out by Sir William's actions and determined to annihilate him upon the shores of his country in which had since come to be known as two jacks of a lamb's tail. So he sent an army of 40,000 men to Scotland where Sir William met by the river Forth and killed so full of consternation and short, blunt arrows and the four's explosive vocabulary which he carried with him. He was defeated at Falkirk and later betrayed by a man he had loaned money to on several occasions, after which he was taken to London and allowed to succumb in sections. Wallace did not free his country, but he put an imperishable name on Scottish valor that holds good to this day.
