Put Themselves Out of Court.

In dealing with the difficulties which have arisen as to delay to commerce in exercising the right of search for contraband, no petty spirit should be shown on either side, and on the whole it is pleasing to observe the broad and frank spirit in which matters at issue have been set out. By both sides it should be remembered that the war itself is responsible for a shrinkage in the output and purchasing powers of belligerents, and that a neutral country with such big exports as the United States is bound to suffer. That, however, will not prejudice Great Britain or her Allies in the eyes of the people of the United States, who generally speaking regard Germany and Austria as responsible for the war, but it should lead the people of Britain to remember that the United States exporters will naturally enough try to keep up their exports as much as possible, and that they can reasonably expect non-contraband exports to be harassed as little as possible. There are, however, two classes of exporters. There is the exporter of contraband and the exporter of non-contraband. The exporter of non-contraband should in no way be embarrassed and we are certain Great Britain would do everything possible to leave this commerce as free as possible, and we imagine too that the United States government should adopt a course of conduct as little embarrassing to this class of exporters as possible. The exporters of contraband do so at their own risk. They have the right to export contraband. Great Britain, France and Russia are encouraging them to sell to them all the contraband they need. If Germany and Austria could seize this contraband meant for her enemies she would do so. Indeed she has done so, as far as possible, but her power to do so has been curtailed so much by the British Navy that there is no fear now of any of this contraband from the States being seized by Germany and Austria. This is of course to the advantage of Great Britain and her allies, but it is also to the advantage of the American exporters. Exporters of contraband to Germany and Austria however run greater risks of loss. The British Navy rides the seas, stops steamers suspected of carrying contraband, and where it is found makes a seizure. These exporters of contraband take the risk, which is well-known, and do it as a matter of business, and probably find it pays, but they have no ground to expect any special consideration even from their own government. They have a right to make the exports, all powers claim the right of their subjects to make such exports, but they all do so knowing that the opposing belligerent have the right of seizure if they can effect. The United States Government, however, seems to have favoured exporters of contraband at the expense of exporters of non-contraband. They have stopped the publication of manifestos, and put non-contraband cargoes in the realm of suspicion in order to put contraband cargoes in a cloud of uncertainty in order that they may escape detention. In short the Government of the United States have favoured contraband exporters at the expense of innocent exporters. Having done so, they have put themselves out of court if there is extra delay caused to innocent cargoes on this account. To put themselves right, it is up to the United States to revert to the practice of the immediate publication of manifest, or to "shut up" and cry quits.

LATEST From the Front.

RELIEF SHIP DISABLED.
HALIFAX, To-day. The agent of the Marine and Fisheries Department here, received a wireless message on Saturday night from Cape Sable Station, that the Belgian Relief steamer Camina, from San Francisco for Rotterdam, via London, had broken her rudder and lost an anchor 850 miles from Halifax and 100 miles south of Cape Sable Island on Saturday. This morning a second message was received by the Department here, asking that a steamer be sent to tow the disabled ship to Halifax. The D. G. A. Lady Laurier was immediately despatched to the scene and will be followed by the U. S. R. C. Androscoquin, which is now coming here. These ships will tow the Camina to this port.

ELEVENTH TURKISH A R M Y CORPS WIPED OUT.
PETROGRAD, To-day. The following report has been received from Tiflis: The Army of the Caucasus has covered its flags with glory by a fresh heroic exploit, having completely annihilated the 11th Turkish Army Corps, with the exception of several insignificant elements, which are fleeing in disorder; we have captured all the artillery of the corps.

CUSTOMS OFFICIALS TO WORK OVERTIME.
LONDON, To-day. There is every indication that the British Foreign Office and Admiralty are inaugurating a vigorous policy for the immediate search and release of all foreign ships suspected of carrying contraband—in many cases Customs officials have been instructed to work overtime in getting contraband unloaded, so that detained bottoms may proceed.

BEING GROUND TO DEATH IN MERCILESS MACHINE.
LONDON, To-day. Granville Fortesque telegraphs from Warsaw to the Evening Telegraph that fighting along Guescha Belmof line shows a definite character. The Germans seem determined to occupy a certain section of the wooded country held by the Russian corps. Their attacks had been aimed at this point for three days, and the opinion seems to be held by Russian General officers, should their assaults continue to fail, with return of severe weather, the Germans must retire to the line they fortified in their rear. Spies report that the line is elaborately prepared for defence. On the Grodelisk-Medvedence route of the Russian advance, the Russian army is improving steadily; soldiers are equal to anything in England in physique, and look able to stand the test of trench warfare. Do not be impatient about this forward movement on the part of the German troops. Day and night German fighting men are being ground to death in the machine that feeds merciless demands of German States. Each unsuccessful charge now means an easier task in future. Some detailed reports received regarding Italy's earthquake disaster increases rather than diminishes the list of dead and enormous property loss.

St. Pierre Bulletin

OFFICIAL, 3 p.m., 17th.
We continue to progress in Niempert and Lombartzyde district about 200 metres. Our artillery compelled the Germans to evacuate their trenches, situated on the Grand Dune and also destroyed the enemy's fortifications and trench works along that line and south of St. George's. At La Besse and Ypres the artillery was busy. At Blangy, near Arras, a sharp German engagement resulted in their capturing Blangy foundry but we regained possession and maintained our hold on the foundry by an energetic counter-attack. The German trench works at La Bousselle was destroyed by our artillery fire. German attacks was also repulsed at Troyon sugar refinery and Beaulne trenches. In Perches, Beausejour regions our advance is progressing in spite of a fierce storm. At La Perche woods near Pontamousson, a German attack was repulsed. In Vosges we progressed west of Orbev. Snow has fallen plentifully all day.

This Date in History.

JANUARY 18.
Days Past—17 To Come—347
GERMAN EMPIRE proclaimed 1871.
EDWARD BULWER-LYTON died 1870, aged 76. A prominent and prolific novelist and dramatist, whose romantic stories made him famous and included "Feilham" "The Last Days of Pompeii," etc.
CAPTAIN SCOTT reached the South Pole 1912, and in March succumbed with four of his companions. COCHRANE STREET METHODIST CHURCH burnt, 1914.

Thy Country's, Thy God's, and truth's.
—Shakespeare.

THE BRAVEST OF THE BRAVE.
In a cottage on a hillside, nestling neath the pine-trees' shade, Pines that wind-swept, make the saddest, weirdest music ever made.—

Sits a woman knitting, knitting, fast
the dim grey twilight falls,
And the shadows' ghostly fingers
"feel their way" along the walls.

Twilight deepens into darkness; by the fire-light's fitful glow,
She is mingling with her stitches memories of long ago.

Look—the dear old lips are smiling,
though the tear-mist gathers fast.
Present, future—both have vanished
—left her with the beautiful Past.

Lipsing, childish voices hears she;
pattering feet run to and fro—Sweetest music to a mother—little lads, she loves them so!

Little lads with paper helmets, wooden swords and spears for shot, Well, they have the soldier spirit; for the rest, it matters not.

Years ago, her two brave laddies to the battle marched away,
And the other young heart, bursting with its longing, chafed to stay.

Ah, the dread, dread news that followed tore the mother-heart in twain
For her two brave soldier laddies, who "would n'er" come home again.

Years ago, But once again the peaceful sky is overcast,
And the thunderous war-note's sounding, and the nation's heart beats fast.

"Lo, our Empire is in danger! Brittain needs her bravest men!"
And the cry awakes the echoes on the hill-tops, in the glen.

How the old blood seems to quicken!
How the brave old eyes flash fire!
Is she not a soldier's widow? Is there any title higher?

"Go, my son, your country needs you.
Who am I to bid you stay?"
May the God of Freedom keep you, guard you ever! This I pray."

So she sits a-knitting, knitting, in her cottage all alone,
She has given to her country of her life's blood, flesh, and bone.

Aye, our boys are stout and manly,
marching fearless to the grave,
But the bravest they leave behind them are the bravest of the brave.
—B. McM. Bell.

HIGHEST TYPE OF HEROISM.
The highest type of martial heroism is not the dashing adventurer of romance, but the mud-stained man in the trenches over yonder—the French peasant, the Belgian artisan, the German farmer or University student, the British clerk, or peer or workman; men like ourselves, used to peace and order and decency, who are enduring unimaginable horrors for the sake of their ideals. Their courage proves again that the human spirit still rises superior to any test that fate can devise. Man's genius for destruction has made great flights from the flint war club to the machine gun, from the tube of Greek fire to the submarine torpedo; but not yet has it distanced his courage or produced perils that his spiritual convictions will not lead him to brave for the truth as he sees it.—Philadelphia North American.

Mrs. G. Scales, Cardiff (G.B.), received the following note from her son, Sergeant Barker, Dragoon Guards: "I had a romantic meeting with poor old brother George. I was lying on the ground, my squaddie having just crawled out of the trenches to be relieved by Life Guards. One of their men shouted, 'What regiment is this?' and after the answer had been given George asked, 'Is Sergeant Barker there?' I knew the voice, and was immediately at his side." This was the brothers' first meeting since seven years.
