Bonne Bay's Protest.

There are no people in "this Newfoundland of ours" more independent, as a class, than the stalwart residents of that portion of St. Barbe District will set forth the chief facts from (and by Bonne Bay we mean all the settlements embraced within the confines of that body of water, while for the purposes under discussion, we water on the coast, and at Bonne Bay that thriving and picturesque fishing village of Trout River, which is so closely associated with Bonne Bay in our columns to-day, and we commend its trade connections.) Years ago. when the French Shore Question was acute, the inhabitants of the stretch of ance of some one in authority, but coastline, comprised within and including the points named, won their assure all and sundry that they are daily bread from the wealth producing waters which washed their shores. only by constant struggle and bitter toil, the antagonism of the French fishermen operating all over that coast, and occupying the best harbours being most difficult to overcome. The old treaties were being constantly waved in their faces and any imaginary violation thereof, meant a visit from an investigating and inquisitive English war ship, whose Commander, under orders from the Home Government, invariably favoured the complaint of the French fishermen, and Dept. last March opened a competition in many cases, without thorough enquiry and in some, without hearing the other side at all, penalised the re-
