COP AFTER THIEF

Clubbed His Man in the Wate and Made Him Swim Ashore While Under Arrest.

New York, Sept. 1.—Patrolman Healey, of the East Eighty-eighth street precinct, is an example of devotion to duty that on, with your heels dangling in the neither flood nor peril can stop.

Ancient James Egan, an enthusiastic air, and laugh at some other boy who Ancient James Egan, an enthusiastic amateur of astronomy, arose betimes on Wednesday morning and sat upon the doorstep of No. 303 East Eight-eighth street to see the eclipse of the sun. He nodded. He dozed. He fell fast asleep. To him came Edward Brown and picked his pocket of $100. Egan yelled. Brown sprinted. Patrolman Healey took up the chase.

The ferryboat Harlem was leaving the foot of East Ninety-second street. Brown leaped for it, missed and splashed into the river. Unafraid, he began swimming rapidly after the boat. Healey hesitated only a moment. In he plunged—helmet, uniform, belt, club and all. He swam full twenty strokes before he overtook the pickpocket. Then— You're under arrest," said on the pickpocket's head.

"Ow!" yelled Brown. "Lea' me alone!
I'll witchyer all right!"
"Swim on ahead of me, then," ordered Healey, and the funniest maritime procession ever seen in these waters paddled back into the ferry slip. Deckhands of the Astoria ferry helped Brown up on the bridge and held him till Healey climbed out.
