Mr. Little-Then, if you don't, support the present Government. Dealing with the extravagance charges, Mr Little said that economy was very desirable, but every person knew that the country was advancing and that person cannot run a business of $50,000 with no greater expense that is entailed in the management of a business amounting to $20,000. Mr. Little took up the question of the Grand Trunk Pacific briefly, and warned his hearers not to be frightened by the figures of the Conservatives as to the cost of the road to the country. The necessity of the railway, the speaker pointed out was agreed to by both political parties, and even Mr. Osler. himself, a director of the Canadian Pacific Railway, had made the state ment that there was room enough ir the Northwest for six railways. Little dealt with the advance in trade showing that now Canada, with its population of less than 6,000,000, did as much trade as all of the South Ameri can countries, with their population of over 40,000,000 combined. Why should there be any attempt to remove the men who brought about this condition of things? They had been accused of stumbling across these things. 'Well," concluded Mr. Little, "all can say is let them do some mor stumbling." (Applause.)

MR. HYMAN'S ANSWERS

Liberal Candidate Replies to Criticism of Mayor Beck and Harvey Hall.

When the chairman arose and introduced Hon. Mr. Hyman as the next speaker there was an outburst of applause that continued for some considerable time. The mention of the popular candidate's name was the signal for an outburst of cheering, the majority of the audience rising to their feet and joining heartily in it. When the applause subsided M Hyman proceeded to express the pleasure he felt at the privilege of address ing the people of East London for the first time. He had the pleasure and honor, he continued, during the last Parliament of being the chairman of the redistribution committee, for the redistribution of seats, and there was no single act of his, while acting in that capacity, that he performed with a greater pleasure than the signing of act which made East London part of the city of London for electoral purposes. (Applause). It was the place, where East London should long ago have been. (Applause). "I notice," said Mr. Hyman, "that last evening Mayor Beck referred to the question as to why there was only one member for the city of London Now, if there is one dangerous ground upon which our opponents can tread in this contest, it is upon the redistribution of the constituencies. Again the Governnent and myself were charged with not taking any action in regard to ecuring a permanent breakwater for West London. To this I can only say that the mayor knows, and if he does not he should know, that the question of a breakwater is not within the juris diction of the Department of Publi Works of Canada.
