SOME EXTRAGROMARY EFFECTS THAT WIND CAN PRODUCE.

Pick up All Movable Things and Drop Them Miles Away-A Cow Lodged in the Branches of a Tree.

People who have never seen a tornado or a crolone have very little idea of what the wind can de. It is hard to conceive the arcount of force that is expended and the m.mer in which i acts is little understood. There are two varioties of powerful wind storms, the cyclone and the tornado. The former is a revolving storm, travelling about a centre of low barometer, where there is a solute calm, the greatest force of the wind a ne found at the edge of this circle of ng found at the edge of this circle of quet. The area of influence may be from one hundred to seven hundred miles in dia-

the greater the wind's velocity. The tornado is a local disturbance, often accompanying in the interior the progress of a cyclone. Sometimes the track of the ternado is limited to a few hundred feet, and it rarely has a width of half a mile, The cyclone carries with it a velocity of as much as 100 to 140 miles an hour. It sends a certain amount of warning ahead of its track, and the acceleration of the wind.

peed at any given point is gradual. The ternudo falls almost without notice, or rather the indications are often so similar to those of an ordinary thunderstorm that only a skilled and careful observer can detect the CYCLONE PECULARITIES. The phenomena and effects of a cyclone in the West Indies have long been subjects of

WINDOWS BURST OUTWARD, One of the most remarkable effects of a cy-clone was recorded at Matanzas, Cuba, where the centre passed directly over the city. As the vortex arrived, the air pressure outside so suddenly diminished that the air inside the houses forced the window panes out, and then as soon as the calm centre had passed the violent wind, having an inflating and lifting effect through the open apertures, lifted many of the reafs off of the roofs off.

The local tornado that so frequently plays have with property and life in the West is, like the cyclone, a revolving force, but if ly distinct from those that accompany the larger storm. Many of the effects of the tor nado are wholly absent in others, and the in

THE TORNADO'S TEARING POWER. I have seen one of the most violent and, s o speak, compressed of these storms, cut a hough thick woods so that at a distance as slood out as clear and sharp agains y as would those of a railway cuttin n earth. Trees standing at the edge the track had their branches clean swep on the ide while on he other there was in perceptible disturbance of the foliage. that grazes the surface. For a space there will be very high wind and some damage, but no such disaster as the ternade has previously wrought. Out of the clouds will some occasional heavy missiles and deluges of water. Then down goes the ternade again mashing and scattering by its own force and adding to its destructive power by a battery of timbers and other objects brought along from its previous impact. Relieved of these masses it again gathers up miscelleneous movables and repeats its previous operation.

The force with which these objects strike is best seen witen they fall out of the tornade's bath, since the work done by the missile is not then disturbed by the general destructive force of the storm. Thus, near Racine, Wis., I have known an ordinary fence rail, slightly sharpened on one end, to be driven against a young tree like a spear and pierce

The freaks of a tornade are wholly unaccountable. In some cases not an object in its trace will fail to feel its power for long distances; in other instances it will seem to act like a cannon ball that ploughs up the earth on striking, then rises and scrikes again, leav spout made a peculiar whiri outward toward the ship, as if to make certain of cutting off their escape, and then they were shut out of sight. The waterspout, by its sudder gyration toward the ship, had just missed the boat, and though nearly swamped by the agitation in its wake, they had escaped.—N. Y. Herald.

A man's kiss is a real punishment to a well-organized, self-respecting baby. The only kisses that children accept without revulsion are those that they ex change among themselves. Mothers, teach ers and doting aunts, sisters and grandmam-mas are responsible for the insatiable kis-ing among little girls; boys won't have it after they get out of skirts and bios. "It may sound like heresy, but it is my can did opinion that children are kissed into bad health. Think of the sore-mouthed visitor through the day, who call and kiss baby; the oleaginous purse-maids and admiring police men met in the park, ver salute the helpless little one, and lastly the tobacco-flavored lips HAINES & TENNANT of father and big brothers and uncles, who amuse themselves at the expense of the small child's comfort. Babies have just as decided tastes as adults, and they are entitled to the same consideration. To make, force, coax or coerce a child into kissing some stranger is an unpardonable offense that every baby is tified in resenting. That is, it sweps up a mass of water that goes whirling over the surface with tremendous writhings and gyrations. Just after the close of the war I was lying in the Chesapeake in a sloop of war. A boat heavily laden with a swimning party had been allowed to go ashore, and just as it was returning a terrije cloud came down one of the small creeks, a' a height apparently of only a few hundred feet. As it reached the open bay a leaden colored, snake-like column sprang up to meet the cloud, and came twisting and squirming straightfor the boat. The latter was so crowded that only a few outs for the men unless they could reach the ship.
