DOCTORS IN COUNCIL.

NTO, June 9, 1893.

In the Assize Court yesterday morning he adjourned Woodhouse case was proled with. The plaintiff was called to the witness box, and for nearly an hour was kept busy answering, as far as his memory would permit, the various places he had worked, and the sums of money that he had earned and handed over to the defendant during the time they had lived together as man and wife. The president having read his annual ad-dress, the council proceeded to the election of officers and the various committees for of officers and the various committees for the year. The following officers were elected: Pre-sident, Dr. C. T. Campbell, London; vice-president, Dr. Philips, Erie, Niagars; regis-trar, Dr. R. A. Pyne; Toronto; solicitor, Mr. B. B. Osler, Toronto. An invitation from the Attorney-General to the council to attend the Pan-American Medical Congress as Washington, and one from Hon. R. Harcourt, Provincial Trea-surer, to attend the "1th International Medical Congress to be held in Rome dur-ing the autumn were received. The invita-tions were referred to a special committee. during the time they had lived together as man and wife. The evidence was read of persons resid-ing in Portadown, Ireland, where Mis-Woodhouse lived before she came to To-Ford in 1869, and 10 years ago she parted from him. He is now in an insane asylum. She brought with her £120, being hall of the proceeds secured from the selling of Honeyford's farm. It was proven that the deeds to the River-street property were in the defendant's name. were in the defendant's name. His Lordship announced that he would make a reference respecting the dispute over the moneys Woodhouse claims to have THE MASSEY MUSIC HALL.

The witnesses for the defence gave evi-dence that damaged the plaintiff's case restival. The World is asked to publish McKibbin, a tidsmith, who is suing George Duthie & Sons, slate and felt roofers, for $1000 damages for injuries done to his son, William McKibbin, on Nov. 9 last by the alleged negligence of the defendants in al-lowing their team to run away in Simcoe-street. It collided with McKibbin's wagon and threw his son to the ground, badly in-juring him. Drs. Fletcher and Galloway testified to the inability of the youth to work. Mrs. McKibben said that for 25 days after the accident her son was delirious, and for six weeks could not re-TOBONTO, JUBE 13, 1993. H. A. The Georgian Bay and Hiawatha, Editor World: A writer of evident knowledge of aboriginal history and languages, but who modestly signs himself "Satis-Superque," lately addressed your readers under the above beading, and re-ferred in discussing the merits of the new book, "The Georgian Bay," to Mr. Longfel-low's Song of Hiawatha. He shows that these legends are found among our Algon-quins, the Chippa was and Ottawas of Lakes Superior and Huron, and are connected with Nai-na-bozho-otherwise called Mena-bojn, the great Algic demi-god. "Your correspondent, while glad to find the subject discussed from a Canadian stand-point in Mr. Hamilton's interesting book, amusingly suggests that in order to avoid in-ternational complications the countrymen of Editor World: A writer of evident ternational complications the countrymen of Longfellow should be allowed to retain intact the honor of holding this mythic personage as one to uphold and give dignity to their land, more ancient than Columbus and the Mayflower saints, to the exclusion of Cana-dian Algonquins

Mayflower saints, to the exclusion of Cana-dian Algonquins. This conclusion, allow me to say, seems somewhat lame and wanting in patriotism. As is shown in chapter v. of the book re-ferred to, Mr. Beauchamp, an American archaeologist, has pointed out the peculiar method of the poem, which attaches Algic myths to an Iroquois personage. Fran-cis Assikinack, the most talented and best educated Ottawa Indian ever in Torento, and whose interesting career is given in Mr. Hamilton's book, was indignant at the sight and refused to recog-nize the Song of Hiawatha as correct in its origin or in expressing the feelings of his nations, as I am told, was of the like opinion, nizethe Song of Hiawatha as correct in its origin or in expressing the feelings of his nation. The late Chief Johnston of the Six Nations, as I am toid, was of the like opinion, which is indeed understood to be not undom-mon among such of our Ontario Indians as are sufficiently educated in English to know of the appropriation or rather exclusion of re-ference to Canadian Indians and places mem-orable in their folk-lore made by the author of Hiawatha. It is not by allowing our southern neighbors to carry off our legends as they do our fish and timber that Canadians show intelligent patriotism. Fifty years ago and more Schoolcraft, then a U.S. official at Macinac, gathered many Algic legends and published them. He also received forvern-ment aid in producing his valuable illustrat-ed books of Indian persons of note. After him Mr. J. G. Kahl, a German savant, but also I believe in U.S. pay, continued the work, which resulted in his large and interesting book called Kitchi Gamf, published in 1860. At the present day the Smithsonian Insti-tution and American Historical societies, in-cluding the excellent Folk Lore Society of Boston, whose president is the learned Horatio Hale. Dr. R. Bell of Ottawa, Dr. A. F. Chamberlain and others have added to the supply of our original folk-lore, and for so dong received the thanks of all intelligent Canadians. Let me conclude with the hope that our writers will, as the author of "The Georgian Bay" has done, 'elaim for Canada in an unob-strusive way all that may be legitimately called hers. Let the stories and legends of low, romance' and war, which grew up among our beautiful northern islands and along our pine-clad shores, not belost or wrest-ed from us. Such efforts as this author has shown evince true patriotism and we need scarcely dread the "complications" suggested with our anichore.
