THE QUEENSTOWN COMMISSIONERS.

A Sharp Dialogue. [From the Cork Examiner, 22nd Nov.]

THE RECENT POLITICAL ARRESTS. THE RECENT POLITICAL ARRESTS.

Mr. Doran said be wished to propose the following resolution:—"Resalved—That we indignantly protest against the unwarrantable conduct of the British Government in arresting Messrs. Davitt, Daly, and Killeen, for drawing the attention of that Government to the severe distress now being felt through the country, and we look upon those arrests as an effort on the part of the Government to shirk their responsibility to make provision to meet the distress, and a deliberate attempt to goad the Irish people into actual rebellion."

When the resolution had been read, Messrs.

partor the voverhable to shark their responsibility to make provision to meet the distress, and a deliberate attempt to good the Irish people into actual rebellion."

When the resolution had been read, Messrs, O'Callaghan and Seymour and Sir George Miloro left the room.

Mr. Doran said that this was a matter that deeply affected the interests of the country and the interests of every town and place where public works were necessary, and he trusted it would meet with their approbation. He thought that in this resolution there was nothing that any gentleman at the board should teel ashamed of, its object was to urge upon the Government the necessity of doing something to meet the distress. At the meeting at the Guidhail, a week ago, Mr. Disraell stated that the Irish were a very imaginative people, and he did not consider any distress existed. But, nevertheless, that same Government of which he was the head, authorised the Local Government Board to send to the poor-law boards a statement that it was their duty to make provision immediately for the reception of additional pangers [hear, hear]. Under these circumstances, whilst Mr. Disraeli denied the existence of distress at all, the very Government that he commanded in Ireland admitted that distressedid exist, and served the Poor Law thurdians with notice that provision should be made for that distress. He the speaker held that the Government, instead of arresting persons should come forward and allow a portion of the public revenue of the country to be spent in providing employment, and not to be sending into the workhouse people who were unemployed. The fact way, however, that the Government interfering with the liberty of the people, so long as it did not recognize the existence of distress. It was an expression of opinion, and he begged to propose it.

Mr. Farrell begged to second the resolution, and he begged to groups and the distress, and if they did speak warmly who would blame them? (hear, hear]. He spoke at one or two of the meetings, but did not say mu to that locality look his load of corn to Midleton, and last night he brought it back without having sold it. That morning at three o'clock he left home for Cork to see if he could get a few shillings for it. There was deep distress and poverty all round, and if men, maddened by dyspair, men who could symputulze with their fellow men, spoke a little moré vigorously than the guarded langlings of a minister was that the way they were to be met? It was a shame, for the dovernment while they were usking for reforms for the poor of Ireland. A wholesale scheme of emigration was what they wanted, whilst the land was going out of cultivation. The hour would come when they would not have enough of produce in the country to feed the people. The Irish landlords denied that there was distress; they were not coming forward to do their duty, and were asking the Government was conting forward to aid the land lords, but they could not put a stop to what was the Divine will, namely—the change of tenure under which land was held in this country. Until that question was finally settled there could be no peace or prostiy in the country (hear, hear).

Mr. Pitzgerald—I must differ with my friend,
Mr. Doran—It is not the first time. Mr. Doran.

Mr. Doran—It is not the first time.
Mr. Doran—It is not the first time.
Mr. Fitzgerald—I respect his opinions, and I know they are honest and patriotic, but I must remember we have the dignity of this town to maintain. This town was incorporated for the purpose of ceausing, lighting, and watching the town.

Mr. Doran-Why did you present an address to the Lord Licutement, the Duke of Mariborough.

Mr. Fitzgeraid-Do not interrupt me; I did

Mr. Fitzgerald—Do not interrupt me; I dld not interrupt you.
Mr. Doran—But that was a political subject.
Mr. Fitzgerald—It was an act of courtesy, and we will do the same again,
Mr. Doran—You are slave enough to do more than that. You are a disgrace to your name.
and to the Irish cause.
Mr. Fitzgerald [excitedly]—I call upon you to withdraw that.
Mr. Doran—I will withdraw it as far as you are concerned, for I believe you are not accountable for your actions.
Mr. Fitzgerald—I say this is an unwarrantable scheme, just as ubsurd as the water scheme.

scheme, just as absurd as the water scheme.
Mr. Doran—What scheme?
Mr. Fitzgerald—This wild scheme of Davitt and his fellow prisoners, challenging the English Government. What chance have we, a parcel of taked and unarmed rustics against the force of the Reitish parts. Mr. Doran-This is a question of common hu-manily.

Mr. Filzgerald—John Bull, who beat Bonaparte, the best general the world ever saw since the time of Casar. You must wait until England is strangled in the ocean, before you can attempt to fight with her. Mr. Doran-I hope you will live until that time.

Mr. Fitzgerald—I protest against this resolu-tion.
Mr. Doran—Mr. Fitzgerald stood up to oppose Mr. Doran—Mr. Fitzgerald stood up to oppose this resolution and he has not given a single facts against a number of facts, and he has endeavoured to put it down by adisplay of oratory. When the test came between Mr. Fitzgerald and mayself as to which of us upheld the views of the people or the dignity of the town, where the people were called upon to decide between us, we know what the result was,

Mr. Fitzgerald—I know what was the cause of it, and who were at the bottom of it.

Mr. Doran—I beg to propose the resolution, and I am sorry to think that Mr. Fitzgerald or any man would be bereft of humanity when

Mr. Fitzgerald-I sympathize with the people as much as you do, and would support them to-morrow.

Mr. Farrell said that they never made any reference to a war with England; that would be a most unwise proceeding; the country would suffer by it, and no people would suffer more than the farmers. As a farmer himself, and on behalf of his fellow-farmers, he would say that they would never countenance such a thing, and he did not understand why Mr. Fitzgerald had introduced it.

Mr. Fitzgerald—It was you brought it for-ward. as much as you do, and would support them to-

Mr. Doran-This resolution was simply an expression of sympathy with the suffering peo-

Mr. Fitzgerald—Well, I protest against it. Mr. Dorun--Will you propose an amendment?
Mr. Fitzgerald—I would have nobody to second me (laughter), but I will protest against this resolution in the name of the town.
Mr. Fitzgerald then left the room.
Mr. Doran pressed the chairman to put his resolution.

The chairman then fook the polling.

Messrs. Doran and Farrell voted for the reso-Mr. O'Reilly could not be distinctly understood to say whether he voted for the resolution or not, and the chairman declared it carried.—Adourned.

Washington, December 9.—In the House of Representatives, Mr. Frost has introduced the following:—Whereas, it appears the peo-ple of Ireland are seriously threatened with the horrors of famine, and whereas the destitution and suffering prevailing and likely to increase are in a great measure due to the system of land tenure which exists in that unfortunate country; therefore, be it re-solved by the Senate and the House of Representatives that Congress views with the most earnest heartfult sympathy the endeavors of the patriotic Trishmen to ameliorate the condition of their beloved country, and extends to the Irish people its sincere wish for success in the endeavors to obtain for them-selves and posterity the inestimable boon of equal laws and self-government.

It was moved in amendment by Mr. Gillett and resolved by the Senate and the House of Representatives—First, that we cordially sympathize with the people of Ireland in their present alarming condition from threatened famile and in their efforts to obtain relief in Ireland, two Irish societies conated $350.

from the oppressive landlord system. Second. that we request the President to communicate to Her Majesty our hope that some just arrangement may be early made by which the Irish peasants may become the owners of the soil they cultivate.

A Poisoned Well.

TORONTO, December 9.-James Shaw McCullough, aged 6 years, son of Mr. S. W. McCullough 245 Jarvis street, has just died from malignant diphtheria, caused by drinking the water of a well, poisoned by sewerage, on his father's premises. The rest of the family are still but proper remedies having been administered, they are recovering. It is proposed to ask for power in the City Charter to fill up such wells and make the taking of city water compulsory. The well in this case was in close proximity to the water closet.

St. Patrick's Society, Richmond, P.Q.

At a regular meeting of the above Society, held in their hall on Saturday evening, December 6, 1879, the following preamble and esolutions were unanimously adopted :-

Wheneas, It has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst, by the unsparing hand of death, our beloved brother, l'atrick Linnehan; therefore, be it Resolved, That in his death this Society has Herole Conduct Rewarded.

It is well known to the majority of our readers that Mr. Richard I. Duggan, barrister, of this city, has on several occasions been instrumental in saving persons from drowning in Burlington Ray, at great personal risk. The latest act of bravery accomplished by Mr. Duggan occurred in the summer of 1878, when it will be remembered that, on a dark, stormy night, he planged into the water off the Emigrant Wharf, and after countless difficulties brought safely to shore the young man Jarvis, who was upset from a boat, his companion being drowned before Mr. Duggan had time to reach the scene. Such acts of heroism rarely escape the attention of the Royal Humane Society of England, and the present case, we are glad to say, has not. We learn that at the meeting of the above named Society, held at the offices, Trafulgar square, London, on November 21, it was unanimously recommended that a silver medallion should be voted to Mr. Duggan, in token of his heroic and praiseworthy services in saving lives. The medallion, which will be forwarded in due course, is a most handsome one. It has been well deserved by the reciplent, who will doubtless be proud of its acquisition.—Hamilton Timex.

MORE BODY SNATCHING.

The Body of an Ottawa Citizen Recovered at the Mile End. The efforts of body-snatchers and dealers in stiffs" appear to be concentrated in an effort to supply our medical institutions with sub-jects. If a graveyard within a radius of 200 miles is descrated by ghoulish traders, tho local police invariably resort to Montreal to capture the offenders or to secure a return of the body, mayhap, of a once level parent. The last case on record is that of Henry Milton, who died of typhoid fever in Hull on Friday week, and, in due course of time, was in-In the Tuesday following the was found to have been disturbed, and this discovery prompted an investigation, which revealed the operations of midnight despoilers. The body was missing, and evidence bore testimony to its hasty and harsh removal. Instinctively the Ottawa police reverted to Montreal, and a message was sent over the wires apprising Chief Paradis of the occurrence. Detective Riche accordingly visited the Mile End depot of the Q., M., O. & O. Railway in time to witness the arrival of a suspicious looking rough box, about five feet by 31 feet in dimensions. The package was addressed in a business hand to "Francois Gordeau, Mile End." The detective maintained a faithful watch over the suspected box awaiting the consignee's appearance, but not turning up the next day the box was opened. Therein was revealed the body Riche was in search of, but in no ways mutilated. The box was again nailed up and this morning the Ottawa express train bore it back to the Capital, addressed to Capt. Sherwood Chief of Police, Ottawa.
