DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

Canada's unity depends on common laws, common goals and common sense. It acquired a basic expression in April 1982 when the Constitution, which legally had been under the control of the British Parliament, was brought home. Queen Elizabeth presided at the transfer.

The Constitution itself is not new — its principal ingredient always has been the British North America Act of 1867, which became the Constitution Act. There was, however, a significant addition — the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Most Canadians have enjoyed basic rights of speech, association and religion since before the Fathers of Confederation put it all together, but these are now entrenched in the Constitution.
