

they thought, and how they acted, is now matter of history. The precise line pursued by your father I cannot designate. I began to be in the Legislature in 1804. I do not remember to have met your father there. I saw him only when he came into Boston, and called to see my father in a friendly way, or on business. I have no remembrance of any conversation on these occasions, which would indicate any difference between your father's sentiments and those generally entertained by his party. I always entertained a high respect for your father, as he was always, in my view, a courteous and honourable gentleman. I regarded his trial and condemnation as a State affair—and was gratified in any opportunity of showing a personal respect for him.

"I have the honour to be, with great respect and esteem, your obedient servant,
