Good Prospects for the Eastern League Next Year.

Keenly Contested Scull Race on Bedford Basin—Turt and Other Sporting News.

BASEBALL.

EASTERN LEAGUE PROSPECTS.

Concerning the Eastern League prospects, Manager Kuntzsch, of Syracuse, says: "The Eastern League will be a strong organization next year, and there isn't a bit of doubt about it. Here is what I know about that. There are five good teams to start with, strong and ready for ball—Buffalo, Toronto, Montreal, Springfield and Providence. It is the other three teams that are bothering President Powers. Wilkes-Barre is sure to be out of it. Mr. Stegmiller can't start the Eastern League if a majority of the managers don't want him. The constitution of the organization stipulates that if a majority of the clubs decide that the membership of another club is undesirable for 'business reasons,' they have a right to oust that club. There is no way that Mr. Stegmiller can get around this. The membership of Wilkes-Barre is certainly undesirable. Two cities that are anxious to get into the Eastern League are Troy and Albany. I retain membership I shall be glad to see them in. There has been no base ball there for two years, and I think that the towns are ripe for it. But there need be no worry about towns for the Eastern League. There are a number of cities ready and willing to join in the league with such strong clubs as Buffalo, Toronto and Montreal. Hartford is one, and there are others. Oh, there is no danger of the existence of the Eastern League being terminated."

The Syracuse franchise and players are for sale at $5,000.

It is a painful sight to see an otherwise robust man limping along on a crutch or cane, a sufferer from rheumatism. It is a disease that will never attack a man who keeps his blood pure and rich. There is just one way to do this. That is, to keep the digestion perfect and the bowels active. All cases of rheumatism are promptly cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It creates a keen, hearty appetite, corrects all disorders of the liver and bowels active. It is the great blood-maker and flesh-builder. It does not make corrupt people more corrupt. Unlike cod liver oil, it does not build up fatty flesh, but tears down the unhealthy, half-dead tissue that constitute corpulence, carries them away and excretes them, replacing them with the firm tissues of health. Thousands have testified to its merits. Sold at all medicine stores.

"I have been afflicted with rheumatism and kidney trouble," writes Mr. C. B. White, of Grove, Genoa Co., Ohio. "I suffered untold pain. I was afraid I would lose my mind. At times was almost entirely helpless. There had not been a night for three years that I could rest in any position. I tried Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I used three bottles of it and am well of both diseases."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. One "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. Druggists sell them and there's nothing else "just as good."

Palmer 2, Elsie Bramble 3. Time, 1:19.

AT OAKLAND.

San Francisco, Nov. 10.—Track fast at Oakland yesterday.
First race, purse, 5 furlongs—Be Happy won, Jerildere 2, Seemseem 3. Time, 1:02.
Second race, maidens, futurity course—Jingle won, Engen 2, Glensher 3. Time, 1:13.
Third race, course 5 furlongs—Junta won, Little Alarm 2, Manzanillo 3. Time, 1:02.
Fourth race, selling, 1 mile—Plan won, Magnus 2, Sam Venado 3. Time, 1:41.
Fifth race, 6 furlongs—Chihuahua won, Egertland II. 2, Sport McCallister 3. Time, 1:14.

AQUATIC.

NECK AND NECK.

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 10.—Michael Lynch, of Halifax, and Harry Vail, of St. John, rowed their second scull race at Bedford Basin yesterday morning. When their first took place, Lynch, the favorite, upset his boat, and Vail rowed home alone. The distance was three miles and turn, stakes $150 a side. It was one of the best races ever rowed here. The men rowed neck and neck until nearly the entire distance had been covered, when Vail forced slowly, but surely, ahead and crossed the line half a length in the lead.

Judgment was reserved. The case of Styles vs. Hendershott was settled out of court. The action of Pierce vs. Pierce was undefended, and judgment was given for plaintiff. It was an action to set aside a deed.

SALISBURY'S STATEMENT

At the Lord-Mayor's Annual Banquet.

"Very Dangerous and Threatened Storm" Averted.

But Britain Will Not Be Found Unprepared.

No Necessity at Present for a British Protectorate Over Egypt.

The Present is an Epoch of Unhappy Omens—The Decadence of Nations—Britain Will Hold Her Own—Speech Comment on the Premier's Speech.

London, Nov. 10.—The annual banquet of the Lord-Mayor of London took place at the Guildhall last evening. There were about 850 guests present, including members of the diplomatic corps, cabinet ministers and other distinguished people and their wives. After the formal reception in the library there was the usual procession to the great hall, which served as the banquetting place.

After the usual loyal toasts, "the Navy and Army" were toasted, Admiral Sir William Kennedy and Gen. Lord Wolseley responding for their respective forces, which were described as being in a perfect state of preparedness to meet any power disputing Great Britain's just claims.

The Marquis of Salisbury, on rising to respond to the toast of "Her Majesty's Ministers," was greeted with prolonged cheers. The premier began by saying that a succession of events abroad had occasioned grave anxiety to the ministry for a year past. He alluded to the murder of the Empress of Austria, for which the double purpose of expressing a universal regret experienced at the crime, and announcing that Great Britain had accepted an invitation to take part in a conference, to determine to take in order to put out anarchy. At the same time he was bound to say that he had no hope that legislation would abate "this horrible, monstrous affliction of humanity."

CRETE.

After referring in a laudatory manner to the British campaigns in India and the Sudan, he turned to the Cretan question and the actions of the concerted powers. He said he thought the proceedings of the concert were not always admired. At the same time he pointed out that patience, combined with moral strength of Europe, has at last succeeded in fulfilling the promise given to the Cretans of giving them autonomy under the suzerainty of the sultan. Continuing, the premier remarked: "The solution of this most difficult problem has witnessed displays of wisdom and unexpected qualities and diplomacy upon the part of the admirals, who have successfully accomplished what the cabinets of Europe had been able to do. I have sometimes thought that if the cabinets were all dissolved and admirals were installed in their places, Europe would get on better."

THE CRISIS IN FRANCE.

Turning to the crisis with France, the premier remarked: "We have had quite recently to consider whether the question of a European war was not very near. But with great interest and consideration the result has turned out happily, through the great judgment and common sense displayed by France under circumstances of unusual difficulty, which I think have relieved Europe of."

A VERY DANGEROUS AND THREATENED STORM.

While matters were in suspense the government was necessarily forced to take precautions that it should not have been taken unawares. These precautions were most prompt and effective, but the immediate necessity for them has passed off. There has been some surprise on both sides of the channel at the fact that the preparations have not suddenly ceased, but it is impossible to stop them at a moment's notice."

THE MATTER OF A PROTECTORATE.

After referring to the various rumors of intended action arising out of these preparations, including the seizure of Syria and Crete and the declaration of a protectorate over Egypt, the latter allusion being greeted with immense cheering, Lord Salisbury continued: "I am sorry to say I cannot rise to the height of the aspirations indicated by the cheering of the audience. I do not venture to prophesy, if we are forced by others into a position which we do not now occupy, what may occur, but we are well satisfied with the existing state of things, and we do not think any cause arisen to occasion effort on our part at present to modify it. Our position causes occasional friction, but taking the situation as a whole, and regarding the feelings of other people as well as our own, we can well be satisfied with the present state of affairs. I must not be understood as meaning that Great Britain's position in Egypt is the same now as before the fall of Omdurman, but we earnestly hope that circumstances will make it necessary to modify that position, as we are convinced that the world would not get on then so peacefully as now."

THE WAR PREPARATIONS.
Referring again to the war preparations, and asking his hearers to look at the state of the world, he observed: "The car has invited a congress to provide for the disarmament of the world; but while we offer our heartiest tributes to his motives and are willing to assist and sympathize in every way until the happy day when his aspirations are crowned with success, we must still provide precautions needed to counteract the dangers surrounding us."

UNHAPPY OMENS.

"In some respects this era, this great epoch in the history of man, is marked by unhappy omens. It is the first year in which the mighty force of the American Republic has been introduced among nations whose dominions are expanding and whose instruments to a certain extent are war. I am not implying the slightest blame. Far from it. I am not refusing sympathy to the American Republic in the difficulties through which it has passed; but no one can deny that its appearance as a factor among affairs Asiatic, at all events, and probably in European diplomacy, is a great and serious event, which may not conduce to the interests of peace, though I think in any event it is likely to conduce to the interests of Great Britain." (Cheers.)

DECADENT NATIONS.

"But what has been impressed upon us is that the subject matter of war is terribly prevalent on all sides. We see nations decaying whose governments are so bad that it can neither maintain the power of self-defense nor retain the affection of its subjects; and when this occurs there are always neighbors impelled to some motive—it may be the highest philanthropy or it may be the natural desire of empire to contest as to which shall be the cause of the nations; and that is the subject of the war."

Lord Salisbury then alluded to the rapidity and the unexpectedness with which war breaks out, and said: "If Great Britain should ever permit her defenses to weaken, her whole empire would come clattering to the ground. It is therefore impossible in the present state and temper of the world to intermit our naval and military precautions."

He concluded by repudiating "all suggestions that our preparations mean that the country is animated by the lust of conquest or a love of war," declaring that Great Britain was only resolved to maintain the empire fathers had received from their forefathers and to support the peace which is the glory and sustenance of our empire."

A great ovation from all the assembled marked the conclusion of the premier's speech.

THE PREVALENT FEELING.
The Duke of Devonshire, lord president of the council of ministers, who was the principal guest at the banquet, said, in the course of his speech in reply to the toast of "Her Majesty's Ministers": "There is no reason to cease from the work of strengthening our naval and general defenses of our country. This is only an incident in a much larger plan. This expresses the prevalent feeling throughout England, and there can be no doubt but that Lord Salisbury's speech, pacific as it appears, will not be received with much enthusiasm by the country."

Judging from the comments from morning papers, more attention is likely to be paid to his grave warning of the necessity of upholding the empire by making sacrifices to provide a strong navy than to his pacific assurances. Even the most friendly journals explain his reticence as due to the restraint imposed by the responsibilities of office.

PRESS COMMENT.
The Journal frankly calls him "a muddler, who is afraid to take the public into his confidence," and protests against his maladroitness suggestion that the entrance of the United States into old world politics will make for war.

The Standard says: "There is a deliberate vagueness in Lord Salisbury's speech, a tendency to hint rather than indicate reliable truths, which is not reassuring."

The Daily News also disagrees with his remarks about America, and says: "Nothing that fails to conduce to peace can conduce to Great Britain's interests. Probably, however, Lord Salisbury only meant that Great Britain and the United States are not likely to be found on opposite sides, and there we cordially agree with him."

The Daily News proceeds to ask whether the Philippines are to be taken which the premier foresees, and says: "The omens are certainly not favorable. The peace conference is a dead-end. Emperor William is hastening back to Berlin, but to Spain. If Lord Salisbury meant anything by his remarks regarding America, they point to a somewhat serious situation. If he meant nothing, he was very ill-advised to indulge at so sensitive a time and in such a public manner in a bit of diplomatic blues."

The Times calls Lord Salisbury's speech "weighty." It says: "His reference to decaying states as likely to invite war, while the nature of the war in this country; but the recent proofs of recent strength may induce Germany to seek an understanding, if not an alliance with England."

Soon Left Her.
"I was taken with a swelling in my feet and limbs. I was not able to walk for four months. I read about Hood's Sarsaparilla, and procured a bottle. I had taken it a long time, and it had done me no good. I took three bottles of Hood's and have not been troubled with swelling since." Rebecca Seavers, Chatham, Ont.
