AND DISCUSS PROBLEMS

J. R. K. Bristol, Chief Speaker at Dinner Given in Board of Trade Building Last Night.

At a special general meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association held last night at the board of trade building, and very largely attended, J. R. K. Bristol, manager of the customs tariff department in a stirring address referred to some of the outstanding features of customs tariffs, and stated that as a result of the great war all the large nations of the world had been forced to organize for protection, and to concentrate on production in a manner without parallel in history, and that if the history of Canada as a nation is to progress in the future, it is to progress in the same manner, and to concentrate on production in a manner without parallel in history, and to concentrate on production in a manner without parallel in history.

At the conclusion of Mr. Bristol's address the meeting closed with a discussion of the problems of the future, and the speaker would have to be based upon the problems of dealing with the duties of doing one's duty by the returned soldiers.

MERCHANDISING EXPERT

TALKS OF COMPETITION

Frank Stockdale Gives Opening Address in Course Before Advertising Club Members at Convocation Hall.

Under the auspices of the Toronto Advertising Club, the first of a series of lectures was given last night in Convocation Hall by Frank Stockdale who is described as "a retail merchandising expert" of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. The subject chosen for last night's lecture was "How to meet today's competition." At the commencement the speaker stated that it was his intention to make his talks as informal as possible, and that he did not intend them to be lectures, but simply plain talks arising out of his experiences.

At the outset Mr. Stockdale pointed out that there were many problems facing the retail merchant and one was retail distribution, and in this connection he maintained that there was no sign of real business, and that in this respect the farmer was better off. "He knows more about his business than we do," he said. "We have no department in our government that looks after the business of the manufacturer, or the distribution of merchandise. We have no universities that take care of manufacturing or distribution, but the farmer has. He has a university of agriculture. Every state has a university of agriculture. The retail merchant has absolutely nothing in fact each one has nothing but the advantage of the methods of the other fellow."

The speaker compared the cost of running a retail business today as against that of 20 or 25 years ago.

and said as the result of his investigations he had found that this was approximately double, and he had yet to find any one dealer who had a business who had been able to increase his gross profits. He knew of actual cases where the net profits 20 years ago were six times as much as they are now.

Why Costs Are Higher.

Regarding the additional cost, he said the chief reason why the cost of conducting a retail store was so much higher today, the increased cost of living. Another reason was the cost of conducting a retail store was so much higher today, the increased cost of living.

He stated that today there were five distinct kinds. One which was fast vanishing was the cross-roads general store. Others were the specialty store, the departmental store, the mail order house and the chain store.

The chief reason he gave for the fact that these stores were making rapid headway was because they were managed and also due to the brain work which was being put into them. It was this problem of management that was the greatest one in the running of a retail store.

"Many a business is not a success," he said, "because the manager of that business gets lost in the details of his business, and no man can hold his end up in the present struggle for existence if he cannot delegate help and so be free to give all his attention and his energy to the full development of his business." In order to still make a profit despite the rising costs, particular attention must be given to waste and lost motion.

The waste in our stores today is the clerk who is doing nothing, and this is small to the waste of the merchandise that is doing nothing. The average piece of merchandise in the United States stays on the shelf for six months, and this constitutes one of the vital problems of merchandising."

At the close of his talk Mr. Stockdale set those present two problems which would have to be solved in bringing in the answers at tonight's meeting.

Mr. Stockdale addressed the Toronto Advertising Club at a luncheon at the St. Charles Hotel, Bay and Richmond streets, at noon yesterday. His address was a preliminary to the regular advertising talk which will continue Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights.

EXEMPTION TRIBUNALS

ARE WHOLLY CIVILIAN

Conference of Representatives is Given This Keynote by Major-General Lord Yessada.

Much emphasis to the fact that the exemption tribunals are to be wholly civilian courts was given by the speakers addressing the conference of 150 military tribunal representatives which took place yesterday afternoon in the municipal building of the university. The representatives came, not only from Toronto, but also from central and northern Ontario, and devoted three-hour sessions to a discussion of methods in administering the Military Service Act. Major-General Legge, who presided, said the military representatives must avoid having a false idea of their power. "Hold the scales absolutely fairly and let your keynote be absolute fairness and justice to individual and industry," was the general's instruction. "Your duty is to watch against any undue carrying out of the spirit of the act. He stated that the tribunals were not to be a military court, but a civilian court. The act was a civilian matter to be dealt with by civilian authorities. The selective draft was planned as a means of securing all men who were not indispensable to the country, in such a way as not to interfere with national industries.

Colonel R. H. Greer, chief government military representative for the tribunals of Toronto district, urged the sub-representatives to be fair and to keep in mind the civilian aspect of the tribunals.

It is estimated by the military authorities that in Toronto and the districts nearby there are 30,000 men subject to the present call of the Military Service Act. Up to yesterday 15,977 of them had applied for exemption from military service, and 22,229 men of Toronto and Toronto military district have filed claims for exemption from military service, and 2189 have reported as ready to serve. Those enrolling with the Central Ontario Regiment were 17; Artillery 15; Infantry 10; Engineers 3; Army Service Corps, Engineers, 12th Forestry Depot, Military Police, A. D. C., and 6th Battery, each one.
