NOVEMBER DIVIDENDS

Will Be $61,587,266 by Railroads and Industrial Corporations.

(New York Commercial)

A careful estimate of dividend and interest disbursements to be made in November by railroads and industrial corporations, through eastern financial institutions, gives a total of $61,587,266, as compared with $56,638,969 in the corresponding month of 1904, or an increase of $4,948,297. The dividends of railway companies show a gain of $4,218,595, which accounts for most of the increase this year.

The Great Northern Railway will disburse $2,176,573, as compared with $546,875 in 1904, owing to the conversion of Northern Securities stock into Great Northern under the pro rata plan of distribution, and Northern Pacific will pay out $2,712,500 for the same reason. Pennsylvania's dividend payment is slightly larger, amounting to $9,081,358, against $9,035,241 last year.

Notwithstanding the entrance of several companies into the ranks of dividend payers and increases in the dividend rates of others the industrial corporations show a decrease of $2,100,638 this year, as compared with 1904 due to the fact that several large companies which paid dividends in November last year have either passed them or the dividend periods fall in other months, notably American Car and Foundry, the preferred dividend of which does not figure in this year's payments.

Bethelhem Steel preferred and Tennessee Coal & Iron are among the new dividend payers, while the Pacific Coast Company has increased its quarterly rate on the second preferred and commonstocks from 1¼ to 1½ per cent. The total of industrials is swelled this month by the payment on the preferred stock of the United States Steel Corporation which amounts to $6,304,920, and the Pullman Company, which will distribute $1,480,000.

The payments of traction and lighting companies shows an increase of $649,536, and the mining companies a gain of $860,899, largely because of the increased dividend on Amalgamated Copper, which paid only one-half of one per cent. last year, and is now on a 1¼ per cent basis.

The interest payments of railroads are about the same as those of last year, but the interest disbursements on the bonded indebtedness of miscellaneous corporations are larger by $1,719,378. The Steel Corporation will pay out $4,539,700 interest in November.

DULNESS IN MONTREAL

The Russian Situation Affects Money and the Markets Generally.

(Montreal Witness.)

Business on the local stock market during the early part of this week showed a slight improvement over the conditions ruling a week ago, but the better feeling did not continue, owing to a falling off in the prices on the London and New York markets. On Wednesday the more 'domestic' of the local issues made considerable decline, Montreal Street leading in that direction. Power was also lower, and Richelieu dropped heavily. This morning, the New York advices state that the serious conditions existing in Russia have caused a weaker market for international stocks, and the market generally has suffered from the uncertainty of the situation. It almost goes without saying that the contemplated Russian loan will be withheld from flotation while the internal troubles continue, and this will compel the Paris bankers to store gold to meet the loan when it is called for. The financial situation will, therefore, be one of extreme difficulty for some time to come. The money market, which has recently shown some signs of being less troublesome, owing to the careful handling of funds by the great banking houses of New York, Paris and London, will be thrown back again into another state of uncertainty, and will cause a setback to any operations intended to improve the market value of securities. Locally, business is very quiet on the Stock Exchange, and this market will watch more closely than ever the trend of prices in International stocks.

NEW DIRECTORS FOR EQUITABLE

At the monthly meeting of the directors of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, Sir William C. Van Horne of Montreal, J. D. Kernan of Utica and William C. Redfield of Brooklyn were nominated to fill vacancies. They will be elected to the board at the November meeting. Sir William Van Horne was a director of the society under the Alexander administration, but resigned during the progress of reorganization. President Morton and Comptroller Day submitted statements dealing with the company's business the first nine months of the current year. There was also a statement covering the society's real estate loans from Jan. 1, 1895, to Oct. 1, of this year. Cash loans for this period aggregate $117,820,500. Receipts of the Equitable Society for the third quarter of this year for premiums, interest, rent, etc., amounted to $16,973,037, as compared with $17,306,314 in the same quarter last year. Disbursements for the third quarter of this year amounted to $11,909,483, against $11,904,535 last year. Receipts for the first nine months of this year amounted to $55,772,176, compared with $53,718,642 for the first nine months of 1904.

Disbursements thus far this year are somewhat in excess of those for 1904, amounting to $39,048,979, as against $37,551,504. Thus the statement shows that the Equitable's receipts for the nine months of this year exceeded the expenditures by $16,723,197, an increase of $556,059, as compared with last year. Receipts from premiums on policies for the third quarter of 1905, however, show a falling off of $1,007,413 as compared with 1904. The statement shows that during the third quarter of this year, "current expenses" were reduced $839,913, but during the first six months there was an increase of $424,943, leaving a net reduction for nine months of $414,970. The reduction of $839,913 in current expenses for the third quarter was said at the society's office today to be due to the fact that less business was written during the period this year than last and therefore fewer commissions were paid and also to the fact that salaries have been reduced and other economies effected. A credit of $881,519 to the profit and loss account for nine months represented profits on securities sold. The amount of the falling off in new business is not given in the report.

THE PRESS IS NOT AT FAULT

(Toronto News).

We doubt whether the speakers at the Insurance Institute who inveighed against the sensational press struck at the root of the evil. The worst thing that is printed in regard to the New York investigation is the evidence. The facts are so bad that the severest comments hardly do them justice. It is quite true that the principle of life insurance remains sound in spite of all these disclosures of robbery, and that it is not fair to condemn the honest and sound company for the crimes of the dishonest. But it seems to us that the right course for insurance men is to take the lead in demanding investigation and reform. If public indignation is taking a wrong direction, let the insurance men, with the advantage of their expert knowledge and experience, give it the right direction. It is for them to propose remedies, not to mourn over the fact that public indignation is excessive and indiscriminating. That is merely to quarrel with human nature, in which the insurance agent ought to be an expert. Nothing would so restore public confidence as a resolute effort on the part of insurance men to grapple with the evil, and to erect safeguards against such abuses as have been exposed in the New York investigation.

Referring to these disclosures, Dr. Felix Adler says: "There should be no rejoicing over "the overthrow of these men in a gloating "sense. Rather should we all be humiliated. In the revelation we are struck by two "facts: First, the enormity of what has "been done; that dishonest men have not "hesitated to despoil the funds dedicated to "widows and orphans, and apart from that "view, one cannot help recoiling from another and a more ominous fact—the moral "obfuscation of those men in whom we had "been wont to repose our confidence. Take "the matter of contribution to political "funds. Here is a whole nest of moral "sophistry involved, and yet we find a man "who stands high in this town unblushingly "proclaiming that he has contributed so "many thousands of dollars to one of the "political parties on the insolent assumption that he knew best what the public "interests demanded. By such a stand he "robs you and me of our independence, of "our assets of political conviction, of our "franchise, and our citizenship."

In these remarks Dr. Adler touches a vital point, that the question is one, not merely of life insurance, but of business morality. There is no reason to suppose that life insurance offers special temptations to those engaged in it, or that it has a specially corrupting effect on business conscience, from which railroading or banking or selling groceries is free. The inference is rather that lax notions of honesty have got into the business world, and that some men engaged in the insurance business have succumbed to the vitiated atmosphere which they breathed. It happens that insurance is a matter about which the people are peculiarly vigilant, because the interest of the individual is so enormous. He might be cheated in a dozen other ways, and the aggregate loss to him, resulting from these petty pilferings, might be just as great, but they would not strike him so forcibly as the one which affects his most vital investment. It is quite possible that in this way insurance is being made the scapegoat on which the sins of the business world are laid. It is for insurance men to recognize the fact that they are, and must always be, judged by a standard of peculiar severity, and to take measures to meet the situation.

PRIVATE BANKING HOUSES

Two Firms Sold $2,760,000,000 Bonds in Five Years.

It is seldom that the public is given any idea of the business of large banking firms. According to the testimony of Mr. Perkins and Mr. Schiff of the insurance inquiry, two firms in New York, J. P. Morgan & Co. and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. have made original sales of bonds to the amount of $2,760,000,000 in the last five years or at the rate of more than half a billion dollars per year. J. P. Morgan & Co. did a rather larger business than Mr. Schiff's firm.

As large as this business is it represents only bonds actually sold on the market. The gross business of these two great houses is, of course, much larger. In fact it may be said that besides their regular business these firms have sold nearly two millions of dollars worth of bonds each working day.

LATEST MARINE NOTES

The Norwegian bark Lingard, Captain Christensen, sailed last Thursday morning from Yarmouth, N. S. for Rosario with 984,00 feet lumber.

One of the neatest light houses and fog alarm stations on the coast is at Point Prim, which has for over thirty years been in charge of Wm. E. Ellis, one of the most obliging lightkeepers in the service, and we might add one of the best known, for the number of annual visitors at Point Prim far exceed the number at any other similar station. Digby being a summer resort, thousands of people drive to Digby Gap, nearly all of whom want to see the inside of the light and get acquainted with its popular keeper. The scenery in summer or winter cannot be surpassed, so they say, on this conditinent and we are not in a position to contradict the statement. Capt. Ellis was formerly a diver and can tell many interesting stories of life beneath the ocean wave He has also sailed in many parts of thet globe and can tell something of life on the sea as well as under the sea. We wish the genial captain and his wife many more years of happiness and prosperity in their home at Point Prim, where their light and whistle have saved many lives and valuable property from destruction.—Digby Courier. Oct. 27.

A BOOK ON HENRY IRVING

The death of Henry Irving will probably start thousands of people on the search for the best account of his life. The newest volume dealing with the great actor and the theatre so closely connected with his name is "The Lyceum and Henry Irving," written by Austin Brereton (McClure-Phillips). Mr. Brereton has treated his subject both historically and anecdotally. He was assisted in the preparation of the book by Henry Irving himself, who put into the author's hands much personal material and permitted him to reproduce important objects from his collection of mementoes. The book is richly illustrated, containing, for instance, reproductions in color of Edwin Long's picture of Irving as Hamlet, and of Sargent's picture of Ellen Terry as Lady Macbeth; and the text gives a very complete idea of the personality, the environment and the achievements of England's great tragedian.

SUSAN GEARY, AN ACTRESS, WAS THE SUIT CASE VICTIM

Identified by Her Mother Through the Rings Found on Her Fingers---Morris Nnthan, Her Lover, Held on Charge of Murder---Possible Solution of Winthrop Mystery.

Boston, Oct. 29—The dress suit case mystery and the disappearance on September 10 last of Miss Susan Geary, of Cambridge, a member of the Shepherd King theatrical company, where she was known as Ethel Durrell, was partially cleared today by identification of the victim's rings. The police are thoroughly satisfied that it was Miss Geary's body which was dismembered and placed in two dress suit cases and thrown in the harbor. They are still unable, however, to discover any satisfactory clue to the author of the dismemberment of the body.

The identification was made today by the mother of the girl, Mrs. Catherine Geary, of 685 Main street, Cambridge, while the confirmation of Miss Geary's disappearance from the Shepherd King company on Sept. 10 came from Morris Nathan, secretary to the manager of the company, and to whom Miss Geary was engaged. Mr. Nathan is in Pittsburg (Pa.) Miss Geary parted from him on the best of terms on Sept. 10, the day after the company closed its engagement in this city, and he supposed that he should see her at the performance in Lowell on the following day. Instead, however, a message was received from "P. A. Smith, of Boston," who signed himself as a physician, and who stated that "Miss Durrell was suffering from stomach trouble and would be unable to work for several days."

Miss Geary dropped out of sight after that and so far as the police are concerned, they have been unable to discover anyone who either saw or communicated with the girl.

Ten days later, on Sept. 21, a dress suit case in which was the torso of a young woman was found floating in the harbor near the Winthrop Yacht Club, about three miles below the city, and on Friday last another suit case containing the arms and legs of the victim was discovered in the water off the city docks, near the mouth of the Charles River. On the fingers of the right hand were three rings, which gave the police the first tangible clue in the case. It remained, however, for a persevering newspaper man to outstrip the police and find in Mrs. Geary a person who had a missing daughter. Mrs. Geary described the rings, communication with Nathan was established and one of the most baffling cases of identification with which the Massachusetts authorities have had to deal for many years was solved today when Mrs. Geary and her two daughters described the rings and afterwards positively recognized them as belonging to Miss Geary.

Mrs. Geary declared today that when she last saw her daughter, which was on Sept. 9, she complained of pains in the side, and she thought she might have been operated upon for appendicitis and the doctor, being unsuccessful in the operation, cut her up. Mrs. Geary also said she knew that it was no illegal case.

As soon as Mrs. Geary's suspicions were confirmed by the description of the ring, which was given her, a message sent to Mr. Nathan at Pittsburg asking him to come to Boston and bring the doctor's certificate.

In an interview at Pittsburg, Mr. Nathan stated that when Miss Geary did not join the company in Lowell that an investigation was started in order to locate Dr. P. A. Smith, but no trace of him could be found. Since then he said he had been in daily communication with Mrs. Geary and urged her to notify the police of the disappearance of the daughter. Mrs. Geary objected, however, on account of the notoriety. Mr. Nathan said his suspicions were confirmed when he read a description of the rings.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 30—After a long and searching examination at police headquarters lasting until after 1 o'clock this morning, Morris Nathan, secretary to the manager of The Shepherd King company, was held on a charge of murdering his sweetheart, Miss Susan Geary, the victim of the Winthrop suit case mystery, which has been puzzling the Boston authorities for more than a month.

Nathan holds to his story that he has not seen the girl since he escorted her to a subway station on the night of Sept. 9. Acting Manager Reinold and Stage Manager Forrest were taken to detective headquarters early in the evening by Detective Cole from the Lincoln Hotel. They denied any knowledge of Nathan's whereabouts and after a long session with Chief Thomas McQuaide were allowed to go. Reinold and Forrest went to the Hotel Henry, "shadowed" by Cole. They went upstairs and Cole secured the number of the room and followed. He found Nathan, Kimeo, Reinold and Forrest coming out of a room on the fifth floor and placed Nathan under arrest.

Nathan was unable to stand when he learned that Cole was from detective headquarters. He had been crying for the past week and was so unnerved that Kimeo and Forrest had to almost carry him to police headquarters.

Nathan was much overcome and it was with difficulty that he repeated his story of his connection with the Boston murder mystery. Kimeo, the Japanese valet of Wright Lorimer, has been a close friend of Nathan and they explained their absence during the evening by saying that they had been for a trolley ride.

Josie Barron, who was a close friend of the murdered girl, was located in Lacock street last night but was not asked to give her story.

Manager Reinold has the doctor's certificate which had been received at Lowell (Mass.), explaining that Miss Geary was ill and would be unable to join the company for some days yet. An expert pensman declared yesterday that the handwriting was that of a man who had endeavored to disguise it. The certificate was signed by "Dr. P. A. Smith." His address was not given, however, and the paper was part of a letter head, the printed matter on the top having been torn off. "Dr. Smith" is believed to be a fictitious name but who it could be Nathan declared he did not know. He said he knew of no doctor, medical students or druggists who were acquainted with the girl. He declared that he had known her for over a year and that she was a good, virtuous girl.

The members of the company sympathize deeply with Nathan and believe him innocent but heartbroken over the girl's death.

NOVEMBER OUTING

A Great Number of This Great Magazine of the Out-of-Doors

One turns naturally now to reading and especially to that reading which will recall to mind the free and living world out side—a world temporarily done away with by the cold and storm that keeps one housed. Among the best matter of the sort we find the Outing Magazine for November. Consider the contents for the month:

There is Robert Dunn's, "The Country Club; A National Expression." All the world seems to love a country club today and perhaps a good part of the world is not so long home from one—but as an expression of our national character, few have thought much about it.

If you've been canoeing before dawn, in the mid-summer when the mists are gray and the water so unruffled that you regret the ripples at your bows and even the quick fading wake behind, you will find a charm of truthfulness about Edwina Stanton Babcock's "Up the River of Glass." She has caught the spirit of the early summer mornings, upon the broad back of a stream when the quiet is almost appalling "and the silence," as she says, "seems full of hollows, hollows hungry for any sound, even if it is the crack of Doom."

There are two articles written from an optimistic view-point on national industries—the sort of article The Outing Magazine takes warrantable pride in producing—one by Jesse Lynch Williams and the other by Rene Bache. The former is called "The Workers of the Great Lakes" and gives an accurate picture of industrial conditions, historical and actual, on the inland seas. Mr. Bache writes upon "Fish Planting as a Business Enterprise," and gives an account of information as interesting as it is little known.

Of other miscellaneous articles we have a communication by Robert C. Saunders in respectful contradiction to John Burroughs' "The Rabbits' Most Bitter Foe," which appeared in the Outing Magazine for June last, and Dennie P. Meyers' "The Beginnings of Football,' which gives a remarkable pedigree to this chief of autumn games.

There is for the sportsman pre-eminently, yet withal of so broad a character that the layman can enjoy it. Edwin C. Kent writes engrossingly on calling moose in New Brunswick, under the title of "Amid Birch and Balsam;" W. P. Kellogg tells of the "Tricks of the Ruffled Grouse;" and there is a description by Agnes C. Laut, of hunting and hunters, of the like of which one does not often hear, under the title of "Sea-Otter Hunters." Charles D. Cleveland contributes an article full of practical suggestions under the title of "How to Hunt Big Game" Belmont Purdy writes about the modern conditions of steeplechase hunting. Add to this an unusually well illustrated exposition on "How a Pointed Dog Holds His Tail," by so well recognized an authority as Robert C. Cornell, and you have a symposium of excellent sporting reading.

A right good thing is prudence,
And they are useful friends
Who never make beginnings
Until they see the ends.
But give me now and then a man
And I will make him king,
Just to take the consequences,
And just to do the thing.
