

Canada in The War

Newsy Notes of Activities in Many Parts of Dominion

Almost all the citizens of Saskatoon have responded by subscribing a small sum weekly toward a fund to be used to provide for the wives and children of those who have already gone to the front, or who may go with future contingents. The first week's subscriptions totalled more than $1,500 which sum may be taken as a criterion for subsequent weeks. The various ladies' societies of the city entered into the scheme with great enthusiasm. An army of about 300 canvassers, each with her own allotted section of the city, covered every home and business place within the brief space of about three hours. The organization was perfect and the result gratifying.

The Licensed Victuallers' Association of Halifax has contributed $1,000 to the patriotic fund.

The Halifax branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce has subscribed $1,000 to the patriotic fund.

Prize winners at the Sherbrooke Exhibition gave five per cent of their winnings to the national patriotic fund. The amount totalled $1,000.

The people of Elgin county, Ontario, will raise $100,000 for the general war fund, in addition to what they are doing for the patriotic fund.

Hon. T. W. Crothers tells of farmers' wives taking feather mattresses into St. Thomas to be cut up into pillows for the lads who go to the front.

Canadians in London will equip and maintain for twelve months a hospital of fifty beds, with power to increase it to one hundred beds.

As a result of the war the ten factories of the Canadian Consolidated Rubber Company, employing 6,400 hands, will be kept running at their full capacity and the output increased. The value of their output last year was about $10,000,000, and will be larger during the next year.

All the jam factories in Canada are largely increasing their output to take the place of the supplies usually imported from England.

Sir George Foster says that any dealers who charged from 9 to 11c per pound for sugar, as some are said to have done, since the war broke out, were guilty of extortion. He says from 7 1/2 to 7 3/4c per pound should have been the limit of the retail price based on the refinery quotations.

It is proposed to organize a militia regiment in the county of Dufferin, Ontario, and adjoining portions of Peel, Grey and Simcoe.

Nearly all the merchants of Orillia, Ontario, have agreed to give ten per cent of their cash receipts next Saturday to the patriotic fund. The town council has given $500, and it is planned to raise at least $8,000, or one dollar per head for the population.

In Clarke township, Ontario, envelopes will be distributed among the school children to be taken to their homes. These will be collected with their contents for the benefit of the patriotic fund.

Ralph Markham, a brother of Major Fred Markham, of this city, is at Valcartier as a member of the Vancouver Seaforth Highlanders, and it is expected that he will be signalling officer for the fifty beds, with power to increase it to one hundred beds.

The Canadian government has bought a second half million bushels of oats for the British Army, this time from the Grain Growers Grain Company of Winnipeg.

Carry on! Is Britain's Motto and Should Be Canada's Also

Those Who Stay at Home and "Carry On" Are Doing Their Duty as Much as the Man in the Firing Line—Business Advice Which Has Done Good in Britain and Should Do Good Here

"Carry On!" This is the motto adopted by the business men of Great Britain and Ireland in war time. The principles upon which it is based are excellently set forth in a pamphlet published in London with the title—"Carry On Your Duty in Wartime. What to do in Your Home and Your Business."

The object of the pamphlet is to show that he or she who stays at home may do as patriotic duty for the Empire as the man who shoulders his gun and goes off to fight, and it puts the case with a frankness which applies equally to Canadians, when it says—

"Whether you are in the fighting line or whether you are patiently and steadfastly continuing to do your share of the world's work, you are contributing towards the gaining of the final victory."

"Civilian England (and this means Canada also) should take as its motto in these days that legend familiar on boarding the motor-tradedmen's premises—"Business carried on as usual during re-building." We are, in fact, politically re-building Europe.

"Personal Duty for Everyone."

"We are all in together, but we cannot pick up a rifle and march off to fight the Germans. Those who remain behind should keep these points before them—

1.—If you have any business you should go about it quietly and confidently.

2.—If you are a manufacturer, you should actually live there, or made it their home, restricting its use to court functions of one kind and another, to official entertainments, to cabinet conferences, to the presence of the sovereign, his ministers, and other dignitaries of the kingdom.

The present King of Belgium, like his two predecessors on the throne, has made his chief metropolitan residence at the suburban palace of Laeken, which has been a business point since the days of Napoleon I, who purchased it for the use of Empress Josephine. He frequently lived there himself, with his first and not his second wife, and it was beneath its roof that he signed his fateful declaration of war against Russia, which was the beginning of his downfall.

The feature of Laeken, in addition to the Napoleon relics, and the well priced art treasures, is a superb conservatory and winter gardens, of great height and extent, was destroyed by a fire, in which the old governess, Clemetine, who had been a second mother to her, was burned to death. The Princess herself, now the consort of the Emperor, narrowly escaped with her life.

The extensive grounds and park are traversed by a subway, and with a set of rails, and by means of which the late king used to leave, not only the palace, but also his dominions, without leaving any attendant. He had to do so to step into an elevator in his private apartments, and to ride down into the basement. There he boarded his private railway carriage, which was carried on a special track drawn by an electric motor which glided noiselessly away, and even by the underground and park of Laeken, to a point some distance away, where this private railroad of the monarch would join the main railway line. He was able to visit France, Germany, and other foreign countries, and to return unnoticed by his subjects, by his ministers, and even by the dignitaries of his palace, when he refrained from showing himself, could never know for sure that he was in indisposition, or enjoying himself abroad.

It was only last winter that King Albert was unexpectedly discovered in the palace of Laeken a very beautiful private theatre, capable of seating an audience of about 400 people, and which, until the late king's existence had been entirely forgotten, and it was the mere chance examination of some literature relating to the palace, which disclosed the existence of this dramatic entertainment given by the late King and Empress Josephine at Laeken, and in which the late king's private railway carriage was used to carry the guests to the leading roles, that led to a search being made for the theatre.

It was found that, used as a sort of luncheon room, it was fitted from floor to ceiling with superannuated furniture, hangings, etc., the doors leading there to being actually walled up. On this being discovered, the late king, who was amazed at its beauty, and in spite of the neglect and ill use to which it had been subjected, it remains a perfect example of the person responsible for the walling up of the doors, and for the cutting off in this fashion of all access to the theatre, was the late King Leopold, who, absolutely abhorring music, was determined to prevent his Austrian consort, who was devoted to music, from carrying out the project which she entertained in the early years of her married life, of having operettas which she had composed, performed there, before the court.

MOTHER KNOCKED OFF POLICEMAN'S HELMET

A young man charged with using profane language was arrested last evening by Policeman Anderson who was called into a boarding house to eject him as he was not wanted there. The mother of the young man came out of the house and when she saw the policeman putting the handcuffs on her son, she assaulted the policeman knocking off his helmet and in return was also placed under arrest. King Albert's Palace at Brussels and His Fine Suburban Residence at Laeken

(Copyright, 1914, by the Brentwood Company)

King Albert's palace at Brussels, and his fine suburban residence at Laeken are today in the hands of the Germans, and it will be curious to observe the extent to which the wonderful treasures and masterpieces of art which they contain will be respected by the Teuton invaders.

The late Emperor William sent an excellent example in the war of 1870. For although he occupied the palace of Versailles for several months, with the members of his civil and military staff, and caused himself to be proclaimed Kaiser within its walls, yet he was most scrupulous in his refusal to allow a single one of his famous paintings, or of the priceless treasures with which the palace was filled, to be removed and carried off to Germany.

On leaving, just as he was driving out of the courtyard, he summoned the French custodian of the place, presented him with a considerable sum of money to be expended in gratifying the various French employes and gardeners, and holding up a little brass bed-room candlestick, which cannot have cost more than a few francs—certainly more than a dollar and a half, remarked, that he wished the custodian to take account of the fact that it was the only thing that he was carrying away with him as loot. It had stood beside his bed in Paris throughout the entire duration of the siege of Paris, and he was anxious to retain it as a souvenir.

Napoleon I. when he occupied the Prussian palaces of Berlin and Potsdam, after the crushing defeat of King Frederick William III. at Jena, looted everything in sight, and carried his plunder off to Paris, including the sword and other relics of Frederick the Great, resting upon the latter's tomb at Potsdam. In the same way he subsequently looted the imperial Austrian palace at Vienna, namely, the Hofburg, and at Schoenbrunn, most of their costly contents. Napoleon also took and plundered the Vatican, and the palace of the Quirinal at Rome, the royal palace of Madrid, that of the Czar, known as the Kremlin, at Moscow, besides those of Laeken, and of Brussels.

At the center of the palace, which was the leading roles, that led to a search being made for the theatre.

It was found that, used as a sort of luncheon room, it was fitted from floor to ceiling with superannuated furniture, hangings, etc., the doors leading there to being actually walled up. On this being discovered, the late king, who was amazed at its beauty, and in spite of the neglect and ill use to which it had been subjected, it remains a perfect example of the person responsible for the walling up of the doors, and for the cutting off in this fashion of all access to the theatre, was the late King Leopold, who, absolutely abhorring music, was determined to prevent his Austrian consort, who was devoted to music, from carrying out the project which she entertained in the early years of her married life, of having operettas which she had composed, performed there, before the court.

THE WAR

The Position Yesterday.

Washington, Sept. 16.—An official despatch to the French embassy from Bordeaux says: "On our left wing yesterday the hostilities were resumed north of the river Aisne on a line formed by the Forest of Laigne and the Craonne."

At the center their line which yesterday was north of Verdun (town at western border of Argonne) the Austrians have accentuated their movement, retreating between the Argonne and the River Meuse the yesterday evening a front at Verennes and Consenve. On our right wing the Germans are retreating toward Metz.

The Swiss bank rate has been reduced from 6 to 5 per cent.

NOTED MILITARY EXPERT'S VIEW

New York, N. Y., Sept. 16.—A cable to the Times from London says:—

Spencer Wilkinson, noted military expert, writes in the Morning Post as follows:—

"Up to the moment of writing, the signs are not those of a decisive victory. The German army has retired, keeping a broad front. The French army in pursuit has spread itself rather than concentrated. The effort to pursue is considerable and cannot be indefinitely prolonged."

"The Germans may soon be able to make a stand and, if that should happen, there will be a fresh wrestle. Not until one side or the other is thrown into one place will the word victory be quite in place."

"Yet, until that moment comes, neither side can relax its exertions. The British government, therefore, must not for a moment suspend its efforts to strengthen and reinforce Sir John French. There are enough regulars and special reservists at home to keep the expeditionary forces at full strength till Christmas. The Indian troops must soon be expected. Then there is the German troops. A large part of it has volunteered for service abroad."

"If the government could see the territorial gains likely to be before the new regulars, it will be making two terrible mistakes, that of not appreciating its best men, and that of not understanding the value of time war."

GOVERNMENT JOBS IN CANADA SCARCE

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 16.—Government jobs are scarce, so there are to be no examinations held for second class civil service clerks.

John Parks, 109 Elm street, was badly shaken up this morning by a fall from a scow on which he was working at Strait Shore. He was taken to the hospital, and is about to be discharged. His injuries are not serious.

THE BEST QUALITY AT A REASONABLE PRICE

"Inconsistent Creatures"

That's what Edward W. Bok, editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, says in his September magazine.

"It is not so long ago when we never went to a dentist until a tooth ached." "But the dentist would say, 'You have your teeth examined once or twice a year took root in the public mind, and the thought that a tooth looked at in this way might spare us an ache and save the tooth, gained ground and is becoming very generally followed."

"But such inconsistent creatures are we that the most sensitive member of the human body, the eye, is neglected until we feel 'something must be the matter with my glasses,' and then we go to the oculist. The very announcement that we are going to the oculist causes our family and friends to ask in alarm: 'Why, what is the matter?'

Inconsistent creatures—that's a harsh term. Do you deserve it, or do you visit the eye specialist at least once each year?"
