WHY VICTORIA LOST.

The defeat on Saturday can be attributed to the Victoria management's error in judgment. In playing Schwengers at third base, a position absolutely new to him, an interest the local team is hoot to play an important game the management will probably not make such a break. Schwengers is a splendid catcher and pitcher. He also bats well. What more can they want? Every man's versalitity has its limit, and without any previous experience third base on Saturday was beyond Schwengers's limit.

Victoria's error column presents a rather starting appearance. There are eight altogether, while the visitors had but two. These were made by Freeman and Ballentine. The Vancouver pitcher, Nicholis, kept the local boys fanning the air for the first half of the game, but he couldn't keep up the pace, and the home team became quite intimately acquainted with his eusive twists. Holness pitched in good form, and is rapidly getting into his old-time condition. It is characteristic of his pitching that he becomes stronger as the game progresses. Acquaintance with his drops, shoots and curves does not breed familiarity. He is more puzzling in the ninth inning than in the second or third. Vancouver's runs were all scored in the first five linnings. Ciphers featured opposite their name on the board from then on. FERNWOODS LOST AT SEATTLE.

The Seattle Cricket Club defeated the Fernwoods, of Victoria, on Saturday. The locals won by an inning and 15 runs. The bowling of Capt. Saulez and J. S. Carrick was responsible for the visitors' defeat, as they were retired in the first inning for the small score of 67 runs. Seattle men hit freely and the runs came easily. When 220 runs had been scored for four wickets Capt. Saulez declared the innings closed and sent the Fernwoods in for their second innings. They did much better, but could not overcome the long lead secured by the local cricketers. Following are the scores: not overcome the long lead secured by the local cricketers. DEVELOPED EIGHTEEN KNOTS. Speed of H. M. S. Grafton Attained on Recent Trial Trip.

H. M. S. Grafton was recently given one of her periodical steam trials in order to measure her steaming ability. The trial took place off Telegraph Bay and consisted of four hours' full speed and two hours at three-lifths speed. Both were very satisfactory, in so far as the working of the machinery was concerned. The engines worked smoothly and well, and steam was easily maintained but owing to the state of the ship's bottom the speed was barely 18 knots.

and also that several loggers had noticed a very unpleasant odor coming from the place.

Provincial Constable Jones was directed to investigate the place indicated, which wild as thoroughly as possible a short time ago, and has reported that there is no sign of the corpse there, although a thorough investigation would necessitate the clearing of the ground of logs and branches, which would be an expensive job. He has also looked into the reports of the unwillingness of the Indians to let white men go there, and of the smell, and finds that evidence exaggerated and unreliable.

Owing to the disappearance of one of Hussey's blankets, Constable Jones is of the opinion that the body was wrapped in a blanket and buried at sec.

Some importance attaches to the discovery of the body, as it may be impossible to secure the conviction of Tekum for the murder, unless the body is formed or some new evidence produced. He is at present on remand.
