The Drunkard's Grave. Dirge like the wind moaneth, Pall-like the cloud loometh, Over you mound, where no dark

Sweetly the babe sleepeth, While the lone wife weep Desolate tears o'er the poor drunkards grave Up from that vault of gloom,

Sadly the warnings come, Whispering, wailing, entreating to save. Ye who laugh merrily, Ye who sing cheerily, Ponder a while at the poor drunkard's grave.

"()nee angels were list'ning,
And dewdrops are glist'ning;
Virtue and Truth their bright banners did wave. Youth's coronals wreathing Dove's flatteries breathing, Little I thought of the poor drunkard's

"The ruby wine smiling, The serpent beguiling, Bacchus soon claimed me a manacled slave While greedily quaffing, The rum-demon, laughing, Tauntingly showed me the poor drunkard's grave. "My fever'd brain reeling, Grim monsters came stealing, Fiend-like round me, from hell's fiery wave

In mirth gloating o'er me, Triumphant they bore me, Shrouded in rags, to the poor drunk ard's grave.

True happiness seeker, Oh, shun the bright beaker; Serpents lie coiled 'neath its ruby gemme

In regions infernal, Their sting is eternal; Rest comes not to him in the poor drun ard's grave.

> Life and Death. BY ADELAIDE ANN PROCTOR.

"What is life, father?" "A battle, my child Where the strongest lance may fail, Where the warriest eyes may be beguiled And the stoutest heart may quail, Where the foes are gathered on every han And rest not, day nor night, And the feeble little ones must stand In the thickest of the fight."

"What is Death, father ?" "The rest, my child, When the strife and toil are o'er; The angel of God who calm and mild. Says we need fight no more : Who driveth away the demon band, Bids the din of battle cease; Takes the banner and spear from the failing hand. And proclaims an eternal peace. "Let me die, father! I tremble and fear

To yield in that terrible strife." "The crown must be won for heaven, dear, In the battle field of Life. My child, tho' thy foes are strong and tried He loveth the weak and small; The angels of heaven are on thy side,

And God is over all,"

The Action of the Sun. Every mechanical action of the earth's surface, every manifestation of power, organic or inorganic, vital and physical, is produced by the sun. His warmth keeps the sea liquid and the atmosphere a gas, and all the storms which agitate both are blown by the mechanical force of the sun.
He lifts the river and the glaciers up the mountains, and thus the cataract and the avalanche shoot with an energy derived immediately from him. Thunder and lightning are also his transmuted strength. Every fire that burns and every flame that glows dispenses light and heat which originally belonged to the sun. In these days, unhappily, the news of battle is familiar to us, but every shock and every charge is an application or mis-application of the mechanical force of the sun. He blows the trumpet, he urges the projectile, he bursts the bomb! And, remember, this is not poetry, but rigid mechanical truth. He rears, as I have said the whole vegetable world, and through it the animal; the lilies of the field are his workmanship, the verdure of the meadows, and the cattle upon a thousand hills. He forms the music, urges the blood, he builds the brain. His fleetness is in the lion's foot; he springs in the panther, he soars in the eagle, he slides in the snake. He builds the forest and hews it down-the power which raises the tree and wields the axe is the same. The clover sprouts and blossoms, and the scythe of the mower swings by the operation of the same force. The sun digs the ore from our very year,

Learn to Forge Your Own Tools.

Many mechanics have an idea that after they have mastered the more legitimate duties of the workshop, they have learned all that is necessary, and can undertake anything in their line of business. Machinists particularly are prope to this errorcommon one, by the way—and think that a knowledge of fitting and turning, once ac-quired, makes up for all other desciencies. In reality, the self-styled finished mechanic is, paradoxically, the unfinished one; for he who acknowledges his short-comings, and tries to correct them by obtaining all the information he can, will acquire a more thorough knowledge of his profession. Comparatively few machinists are competent to dress their own tools, or, indeed, handle the blacksmith's hammer on any work. How many times such knowledge would have been invaluable, we leave individuals to decide from their own experience. A simple weld which they were unable to make, a faculty for dressing chisels without putting their own eyes in danger by striking the anvil instead of the tool, would assuredly have stood persons ignorant of such details in good service in time of need. Apprentices who go to the tool-dresser to have the edges of their chisels or other instruments renewed, will do well to observe the process and inform themselves of it, instead of throwing coal at the helpers or otherwise conducting themselves in an unseemly manner. Observation and experience are twins and inseparable, and no youth or indeed any adult can hope to attain eminence or proficiency without paying some respect to the matters herein alluded to.

"I am surprised, wife, at your ignorance," said a pompous fellow. "Have you never seen any books at all?" "Oh, yes she replied, "in a number of cases."

A downeaster sold another man a horse for a certain number of sheep, to be delivered such a day. They came promptly but, sheared! It was a cool transaction, especially for the sheep.

"The times are so hard I can hardly keep my head above water," said a husband the other night to his wife, who was importuning him for a new dress. "No," she replied with some asperity, "but you can keep it above brandy and water easy enough.'

The celebrated John Foster thus describes a bigot: "He sees religion, not as a sphere, but a line; and it is a line in which he is moving. He is like an African buffalosees right forward, but nothing to the right or left. He would not perceive a legion of angels or devils at the distance of ten yards on the one side or the other."
