CANADA'S FEATHERED FRIENDS

On a frosty morning in the early spring, just after the first brown patches of grass have appeared in the meadows, a joyous, warbling song is heard in the orchard. The singer is easily found—the first glimpse of that blue back, bluer than the bluest of summer skies, tells you his name—the Bluebird. Then with a flourish of one or both wings, he settles on a point of vantage and watches the ground below him for insect prey.

The sunshine is already warming some of them to life for their careers of destruction, but the Bluebird pounces again and again from his perch, and many insects are removed which, with their numerous progeny would serve to lay waste and destroy the crops of field and garden.

The Bluebird is but one of an army of migrants to follow. As spring advances they swarm in our shade-trees and hedges, and scatter over field and forest; even in the air they have their hunting ground; and almost without exception they are working in man's interest by holding in check the insect hordes which, if they held undisputed sway, would render man's agricultural efforts of no avail.

When man clears the forest and plants various plants for food he disturbs the complicated series of events known as the balance of nature. The insects often find his exotic vegetation more succulent and attractive than their native hosts, and transfer their attention to this new source of food. Certain of the birds have increased because of these new prairies, which were once forests, and which man has made, and many others find the edges of the man-made fields attractive. We must maintain the bird control of the insect pests as best we can under these conditions. This can be done by protecting the birds which have succeeded in adapting themselves in a measure to man: the birds which come into the garden and orchard and find it good and stay there. We can encourage them to come by feeding them in winter and by providing suitable nesting-sites so that they will stay with us when we need them most and when they need most insect food; and that is when they are raising their young.

Suitable shrubbery, such as a few dense tangles of bushes and creepers or a shady hedge, will afford them shelter from their enemies, and if their greatest enemy, the cat, is banished or tethered or otherwise disposed of, they will amply repay us for all our trouble. The damage we suffer from insect pests is enormous; without bothering about giddy figures, it suffices to say that insects destroy from five to twenty-five per cent of each year's crop of everything man raises. The forest losses, which are even more difficult of computation, must be great. The birds help to hold these enemies of ours in check; these lovely creatures which we would protect as we do flowers for their beauty, and which we all must admire because of their musical ability and cheering presence, are really working for us from dawn to dark, and even through the hours of darkness. How much we owe them! How carefully we should guard them from danger.

[Copies of the Treaty and Migratory Birds Convention Act may be obtained from the Commissioner, Dominion Parks Branch, Department of the Interior, Ottawa.]

And then, when you have studied and known the birds that work for you at home; when you really know the Robin, and Oriole, and Chickadee, and Chipping Sparrow, and a dozen others, you may be tempted to go and see the ones that protect your woods; the shy, retiring birds that avoid the haunts of man and prefer the cool, silent forest; the Hermit Thrush, the Rose-breasted Grosbeak and the Veery, and very many more. If you once begin to know the birds, they will have a new friend and protector and the gain will not all be theirs. A new pleasure has been added to your experience, new thrills may make your outing an event, and there will be a new motive to draw you from the mundane things of life into God's great outdoors, from which one always returns refreshed and rejuvenated to take up the daily task.

When autumn comes, your new-found friends gradually disappear from their accustomed haunts. You miss them, but others have taken their place. The Chickadees and Creepers now search every nook and cranny for the hibernating insect or the cluster of insect eggs that would otherwise spell disaster or damage for your shade and orchard trees next year. Attract the Chickadee to your house and to your orchard in winter. A piece of suet or a scrap of bacon rind nailed to a tree will keep him working in your immediate neighborhood, and the winter days will seem shorter for his bright and cheering presence. He will appreciate a shelter if you provide one by nailing up a small bird-box or two, and in these he can spend the cold winter nights in safety.

The birds which leave in the fall spend the winter in the United States or even south of them. Your Bluebird and Robin may spend the winter in Virginia or in California. Therefore both the United States and Canada have agreed by treaty to protect all migratory insectivorous birds belonging to us both. It is illegal throughout the whole of the United States and Canada to shoot them or rob them of their nests or eggs. Everyone must help enforce this treaty, and the best beginning is to protect the insectivorous birds in your own garden, on your own farm, or in your woods. If you see persons shooting insectivorous birds, report them to the nearest game warden, not because you want to cause trouble, but because you believe in protecting the birds which work for us, and are our common property.

If you are a sportsman, you will be glad to know that close seasons of uniform lengths have been arranged so as to protect the migratory game birds and wild-fowl. Spring-shooting of all migratory game birds is forbidden, and they can make in safety the northward journey to their breeding grounds, there to replenish their numbers. A permanent close season for a number of species such as Wood Ducks, Elder Ducks, Band-tailed Pigeons, Little Brown, Sandhill and Whooping Cranes, Swans, Curlew, and all shore-birds, except Woodcock, Golden Plover, and Greater and Lesser Yellowlegs is now in force, so that these depleted species may increase in number. As a true sportsman, use every influence in your power to assist in the observation and enforcement of the Migratory Birds Convention Act. We need our insectivorous birds to protect our crops and forests, and we need our game so that our children and our children's children will not find their heritage in wild-life has been destroyed by us. Let us have our health-giving out-door sport, but do not destroy all game. Leave enough so that our descendants, for whom we hold this vast domain in trust, will not lack this incentive to visit the great out-of-doors.

[Copies of the Treaty and Migratory Birds Convention Act may be obtained from the Commissioner, Dominion Parks Branch, Department of the Interior, Ottawa.]

Novel Uses for Machinery of War

A few of the possibilities of turning weapons of war into implements of peace, as indicated by recent news items have been thus summarized: A San Francisco despatch tells of an Army lieutenant killing a small whale with his airplane gun off Imperial Beach. A New Orleans despatch states that a submarine-chaser has successfully employed its under-water listening device in detecting a whisky-laden launch that was evading excise laws. From the Southern mountains come reports of the employment of airplanes in sailing over remote valleys and slopes and spotting illicit stills by their smoke. Submarines are urged in Arctic exploration and commerce—running beneath the ice—more enthusiastically than ever. The docile tanks are going back from the front to regular employment in heavy traction.

BIG SURPRISE TO MANY IN CARLETON PLACE

People are surprised at the INSTANT action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka. ONE SPOONFUL flushes the ENTIRE bowel tract so completely it relieves ANY CASE sour stomach, gas or constipation and prevents appendicitis. The INSTANT, pleasant action of Adler-i-ka surprises both doctors and patients. It removes foul matter which poisoned your stomach for months.

A soft blue-white diamond weighing 38 1/2 karats, has been found at Jagerfontein mine, South Africa, which promises to become one of the diamond fields' historic gems.

He Wanted Her Real Name

Mr. Cyril Maude, who came to Toronto direct from Washington, tells a number of anecdotes that are amusing the people of the American capital just now. One of them concerns a younger member of the Vanderbilt family, who has been doing canteen work. A short time ago Mrs. Vanderbilt was waiting on a Sunny who evidently enjoyed her conversation. At last he suggested: "I think we could be pretty good friends. But don't you think it would be a good idea to tell one another our names? Mine is Sam Jenkins. What's yours?" The lady replied, with a smile, "Mrs. Vanderbilt."

Sunny looked at her, winked and remarked, "Hop high, chicken."

"What did your father say when he broke his pipe, Walter?"

"Shall I leave out the wicked words, mother?"

"Why, certainly, dear."

"Then I don't believe there is anything to tell you mother."

A Disturbing Influence

"Germany," said James M. Beck, the eloquent lawyer of New York—"Germany now declares her pacifism. She wants to participate in the League of Nations. Our parlor Bolsheviks would welcome her, too."

But the rest of us know well that Germany's presence in the League of Nations would be like Wash White's presence at the wedding.

"What caused the wedding to break up in a fight?" asked the magistrate.

"It was Washington Whit's fault, your honor," said the bride. "De wedding guests was frowin' ole shoes at us from de gallery, and Wash wot was jealous 'cause I jilted him, he started frowin' ole hoss shoes."

Willing to Be Taught.

"Diarist" of the Westminster Gazette says he had been hearing much lately of the Americans in France and the impression made by them upon the British there. "Without giving offense to anybody," he remarks, "I hope I may say that British admiration of them has gone far beyond the limits that were considered likely to be reached, and that they have become strong favorites. But there is one point in particular which seems to have impressed every officer who talks to me on the subject. They all quite expected to find the Americans fine men physically, with plenty of intelligence and their full share of courage and dash and endurance; but they agree that they have been surprised to note the eagerness of the new allies, to seek advice. 'You have been, at this game for years,' is, I am told, the usual formula; 'but we are fresh at it. Tell us what you know.' It is an admirable frame of mind," adds "Diarist," "and one that promises rapid progress on the part of the willing students."—Christian Science Monitor.

In Defense of Her Flag.

How the union jack was ably defended by an Irishwoman in the streets of Paris on July 4 is amusingly told: "Outside one of the biggest drapery shops of Paris two ladies handled a union jack which lay on a great pile of flags for sale and remarked in French on its cheapness. The salesman, unskilled in accents, was rash enough to explain the low price by saying that 'the union jack wasn't in season.' He received in reply the most eloquent discourse attainable by an indignant Irishwoman of unblemished loyalty; and an Irish brogue speaking French is an engine of war before which the most intrepid must quail. There is one Frenchman who will never again suggest that there is a close season in union jacks."

A New Fuel.

Because of the fuel shortage that is facing the United States and Canada a new fuel is to be introduced known as "carbocoal." A plant is being erected in Virginia for the protection of this substance which is a by-product. Its use has been tested by the United States navy and two railroads, which pronounce it a valuable smokeless fuel. By a new process bituminous coal is treated in such a manner as to recover greater quantities of such valuable by-products as tallow, sulphate of ammonia and valuable oils. From the residue is made the smokeless fuel "carbocoal" in the form of briquettes.

His Bright Idea

"Now, ladies and gentlemen," said the professional conjurer, with a wave of the hand, "this is the magic cabinet. I invite any lady in the audience to enter this cabinet. I will then close the door, and when it shall be opened again the lady will have disappeared, leaving no trace."

There was an impressive silence until a little undersized man in the second row turned to an enormous woman who sat by him, and breathed eagerly: "Maria, dear, won't you oblige the gentleman?"

One Folly Punctured

It was urged the other day by a British peer that Germany be "mortgaged for 1000 years," but a thousand years is a long time. In 919 the Danes defeated King Niall Glandubh, near Dublin, and in 2919 for all we know a Maori chief may be surveying the ruins of London; the changes at any rate will be quite as stupendous as they have been since 919. It would be quite as sensible to speak of mortgaging Germany to all eternity.—Springfield Republican.

The Twins

The mother of two sons, twins, met one of the brothers in a field one day.

"Which of you two boys am I speaking to?" asked the mother. "Is it you or your brother?"

"Why do you ask?" said the lad prudently.

"Because if it is your brother I will box his ears."

"It is not my brother, it is I."

"Then your brother is wearing your coat, for you had a hole in it."

"No, mother, I am wearing my own coat."

"Good heavens!" shrieked the mother looking at him intently. "You are your brother after all."

Caveat Emptor.

(Let the Buyer Beware.)

"Caveat Emptor" or "Let the Buyer Beware" was the motto of the old time merchant. His business was to get all he could and give as little as possible in return.

That was dishonest, of course, and experience has shown that it was not even profitable. The successful merchant or manufacturer to-day is the one who gives real value. The dealer to-day who wants to establish a permanent business knows that Honesty is the best policy and to prove that he is there to stay, he advertises.

You can depend on getting a square deal from the regular and persistent advertiser.
