Turk Turner says goodbye

by Randal Smathers

CALGARY — "It was just a case of goaltending, I thought," is how Bears starting netminder Darren "Turk" Turner described their loss to the Calgary Dinos this weekend. "We made a few mistakes in our own end, but I didn't come up with the big saves when we really needed them. You don't win championships without big save goaltending."

Turner was being harder on himself than he really needed to. Most of the Calgary goals came from the Dinos best snipers standing where they didn't belong with the puck, namely 10-15 feet in front of the net. The Dinos powerplay was creating a lot of chances, and their forwards were converting them.

Clare Drake chose to stick with Turner, a fifth-year veteran, in a classic case of dancing with the one what brung ya. Turner stoned the Dogs from Saskatoon last Sunday after a shaky game two nights earlier, in order for the Bears to reach the Canada West final.

Dino coach George Kington played Dr. Hook with his first-string goalie. Al 'Hunky' Hryniuk got the yank 15:28 and three goals into the first period of the first game. Grant McPhail stepped in, and while not spectacular, was good enough to earn back to back wins.

Hryniuk had taken the top spot from McPhail when the latter was hurt in a collision in the Dinos last visit to Varsity rink on Feb. 5.

"Two weeks before the playoffs started, he (Hryniuk) was on a roll, so they played him for the Manitoba series, and he was good there," said McPhail, "but he had some bad luck, some tough bounces, and I was lucky enough to go in and do the job."

Luck indeed played a part for McPhail, as for most "hot" goalies. Sid Cranston had a pair of posts and Stacey Wakabayashi hit the crossbar in the final game, but those don't count on the scoresheet.

McPhail came out of nowhere this year, or close enough. Although heavily recruited by the Dinos, he chose to go with the Lethbridge Broncos of the WHL at the start of the year.

"Things weren't working out in Lethbridge, so I decided to come here. They needed a goalie," he said. The Dinos other goalie, Ken Trousell, quit at midseason to devote more time to his studies, the normal euphemism for being academically ineligible, or close to it. "A championship team like this, I'm just happy to be a part of it."
