An experience of fifteen years' breeding polled cattle has taught me that horn are not only a dangerous appendage, but too expensive. I can keep an increase of 20 per cent of polled cows over cows with horns, same in size, on the same pasture or fodder, and the polled ones will keep in the best condition. There is not a single objection to polled cattle that will bear investigation. The peace and quiet and comfort to be enjoyed by the breeding and keeping and caring for a herd of cattle without horns can be known only by experience. A man that would beat a sword into a plough-share or a spear into a pruning-hook would with equal propriety knock the horns off his herd.
