SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, who was at the commencement of the present war, and has since continued to be a British subject or a subject of an allied or neutral country, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for District. Entry by proxy may be made on certain conditions. Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of land in each of three years.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate 50 acres extra. May obtain preemption patent as soon as homestead patent on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot secure a pre-emption, may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Holders of entries may count time of employment as farm labourers in Canada during 1917, as residence duties under certain conditions.

When Dominion Lands are advertised or posted for entry, returned soldiers who have served overseas and have been honourably discharged, receive one day priority in applying for entry at local Agent's Office (but not Sub-Agency). Discharge papers must be presented to Agent.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

N.B.—Unauthorised publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

AN ARMY OF SONG

"Here we are! Here we are!
Here we are again!"

The battalion came swinging down into the dusty main street of the village, and burst into song as it reached the first house. It was anxious, evidently not to be overlooked. It was anxious, also, to make it perfectly clear that there was nothing in the war in general, in the dust of that road in particular to make it other than gay-hearted. So with a roar there came, on the heels of the song of arrival, "Are we downhearted? No!" And then the battalion broke into song again.

"Not while Britannia rules the waves. Not likely
While you've Jack upon the sea,
And Tommy on the land you need not fret.
It's a long, long way to Tipperary,
But we're not downhearted yet."

But it is not always that a British soldier sings what he feels, his good humor and his confidence, so directly and simply as that. His humor more often goes by contraries. If he is cheerful, he likes to show it by singing a melancholy song. Nothing pleases him more than a song that does not suit the occasion, or a song with words that obviously do not belong to it, or a song that tells you, with every exaggeration possible the exact opposite of what he feels. In fact at every turn of his life his humor is moved above all by anything that is inappropriate. He likes sentiment, but he likes better still to parody it. He likes to give a comic touch at times even to his patriotism, as in the song of the patriotic pawnbroker going to war. The words run something like this;

"Goodbye, Rachel! Let everybody know
I'm fighting for the shamrock, the thistle and the rose,
I'll be there, dear, when the bugle calls,
Fighting for my country and the Three Brass Bottles."

In fact he will make fun of anything, and, with most pleasure of all, he will make fun of himself. If he can get somebody to write his verses (to any tune) declaring (as in one pathetic song, "I want to go home") that he is a coward, that he will do anything to keep away from the fighting, that he is willing to send all his family into the trenches, if only you will not send him, then he has found a song that he will sing with more cheerful pleasure than any rousing verses of war.

The Marines have as their song:
"A life on the ocean wave
A home on the rolling deep,
Where the scattered waters rave,
And the winds their revels keep
And so on

But you do not suppose that such stormy and solemn sentiments about the sea will satisfy the Marine. He knows enough of the sea to prefer to sing of it in anotner way. He prefers:

"A life in the Royal Marines
Is better than going to sea
But what the difference is
I'm hanged if I can see."

There are many hymn tunes that the soldier sings, for they are simple nearly everyone knows them and they are easy to march to. But he sings them to his own words. They are always very secular words. To one well-known hymn he sings

"When the beer is on the table
When the beer is on the table
When the beer is on the table
When the beer is on the table
I'll be there."

These words sung to a tune of such different associations, on an open dusty road, have an exquisite and tantilising inappropriateness such as the British soldier loves.

Many roads of Britain and France have heard the tramp of feet to the sound of the "Church's One Foundation." But the words they have heard have nothing to do with the church. They are more than secular:

"We are the ragtime army
We art the R. N. D.
We cannot fight, we cannot shoot
What earthly use are we?
But when we get to Berlin
The Kaiser he will say
Ach! Ach! Mein Gott
What a jolly fine lot
Are the boys of the R. N. D."

But it is not only the Royal Naval Division that may have the pleasure of proclaiming its uselessness in those words, any unit which can fit its name (however roughly) into that verse, can and does do the same.

It is the advantage of many soldier songs that they can be altered, without any trouble and at a moment's notice, to the occasion. There is that other hymn which goes now to the words:

"Marching marching marching,
Always bloomin' well marching
From reveille to lights out
We're always marching on.
Marching, marching, marching,
Always jolly well marching
But there will come a time some day
When we shall march no more."

But should it begin to rain, you can sing the song again, with a new point and freshness "Raining, raining, raining"—just as everyone in his early days in the army sings it with vehement bitterness to "squad drill, squad drill, squad drill"—So each song in its time plays many parts.

Sentimental songs have their short and hectic day. They run like a flame through an army; they are sung and sung; and then forgotten; though their parodies live after them. But some for special reasons will be remembered. There is "The long, long trail" which everyone is singing. It has that simple sentiment of sadness and hope with which a soldier, when he is not laughing or swearing away the ills of his profession, will best comfort his heart:

"There's a long, long trail a-winding
Unto the land of my dreams
Where the nightingales are singing
And a white moon beams.
There's a long, long night a-waiting
Till my dreams all come true,
Till the day when I'll be going down again
That long, long trail with you."

It is no better nor worse than many others, but it will be remembered. For the Middlesex men sang it as they waited on the decks of the sinking Tyndareus. So too it is with others; poor songs, ribald songs, songs of no merit, but they may win immortality through the men who sing them.

WAR VETERANS ASSOCIATION

May be Welded With British Comrades

There is a possibility that the Great War Veterans' Association, now recognized as one of the most potent organizations in the Dominion, will become welded into the G. W. V. of the Empire, the greatest organization that the world has ever seen. An organization is now under way in England, known as the Comrades of the Great War. The preliminary announcement is signed by several members of parliament and the promoters insist on its non-political and democratic character.

As the aims of the G.W.V.A. and the Comrades of the Great War are practically identical, Canadian officials are of the opinion that the two associations could unite with mutual benefit, and they have already communicated with the overseas organization.

While officers of the Brantford branch know nothing of the possible amalgamation of the two bodies, branches in the larger cities are entering into the scheme, and it is possible that something tangible and concrete may be evolved out of the negotations.

HARVESTERS LOOK

36,000 farm laborers are wanted in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, for the harvesting of the crop.

The Canadian Northern Railway will operate the first excursion trains for the west, leaving Toronto Union Depot at 10 p.m. August 23rd and 30th, and running through solid to Winnipeg.

The equipment will consist of electric lighted colonist cars, lunch cars, and in addition the railway will continue their last year's innovation of keeping a special car for the accommodation of single women and families, and of placing it in the train where the occupants will be separated from the other passengers.

The territory served by the Canadian Northern lines offers the widest choice of employment with high wages, but regardless of where you locate, remember we give you the best service to Winnipeg where you will r-purchase to final destination, no matter on what line it may be.

For leaflet showing special train service with dates, number of men required at various points and other information, apply to John A. Dowling and Son, Town Agent, or General Passenger Department, Canadian Northern Railway, Toronto.
