COW REPORTED ON TIME.

to Be Waked at the Right Time

John E. Foley, chief deputy in the office of the United States Marshal here, used to be a telegraph operator and his last service in that capacity was for the Wabash Railroad Comwas for the Wabash Railroad Com-pany at the little station of Denver, Ind. He had a night job and a lone-some one, for the inhabitants of Den-ver were usually in bed by 9 o'clock and from that time till 1:20 A. M., when he left his office, there was not a soul stirring in the town. The opera-tor was off duty as soon as the 1:30 fast freight passed the station and his report was sent in, but the time dragged intolerably upon his hands and he often fell asleep despite his desire to stay awake. After a while he began to take the risk of napping a little during the night and, as the fast freight was the only train that passed through between 10 o'clock and daylight, he feit himself reasonably sure of being awakened by the noise of the train. One night, however, he was awaken-ed suddenly and he thought he heard No. 21 go past the station. He rubbed his eyes and listened and then rushed to the der and looked up the track He could hear a rumbling noise, but a curve in the track cut off a view of the train's red lights, if it was really a train, and Foley did not know what to do. He seated himself at his instrument and pretty soon he heard the agent at a station further north report the train on time. Foley then sent in his belated message and fully expected to be called up the next day for an explanation, but his tardiness appeared to escape attention. The incident convinced him, though that he could no longer escape atention. 1, o-fvTi longer depend upon the passing train to awaken him and he must stay awake. Several nights of close watch fulness followed, but he found it difficult to keep awake without going out and walking up and down the track. This proved more lonesome than staying in the office, but it finally suggested an expedient which he proceeded to put in operation the next night.

As soon as all the longers about the little station had left for their homes Foley tied a cord to a telegraph pole across the track just opposite the station window and passed the other end into the station to this end of the cord he tied a couple of oyster cans, and then he sat down and viewed his work and called it good. He could now take a nap, he thought, without fear of No. 21 passing by without waking him. for the engine would snap the cord in two and the falling cans would bring him to himself in an instant. So Foley adjusted himself in his chair, placed his feet on the table by the ticker and leaned back for a nap. He was arroused by the falling of the cans about him and in the confusion h cheard or thought he heard the clatter of the rapidly passing train. Looking at the clock he saw it was precisely 1:30 and he sent in this message to the chief train despatcher: 'Number 21 on time." Satisfied with his experience, Foley gathered up his cans and laid them away for another occasion, and then put out the lights, locked the station door and turned to go home. At that mement his eyes fell on a brindle cow standing by the side of the track and gazing at him in mute astonish-At the same the whistle of an approaching locomotive and realized that he had reported No. 21 on time when it was fully five minutes late. The next day an operator appeared at Denver to take Foley's place and before night he was out looking for another job, but he still contends that his scheme would have worked had not that brindle cow broken the cord to which the oyster cans were attached.

THE SECRET OF EXPRESSION

Various Things That Help to Make Woman's Face Attractive.

Many of the most fascinating women of history have been without a single beauty of feature. Therefore their attraction must have depended on expression, either inborn or acquired. Its subtleties depend as much on temperament as on education. A perfectly irregular face is sometimes magnetic by reason of its animation and earnest-

Irregularity of that kind is preferable to a beautiful and immobile countenance that smiles perpetually like an everlasting blue sky. There is only a hair line between repose and stagnation and one is as pleasing as the other

It is the quality, rather than the quantity of the mind that affects ex-Excessive brain work is pression. detrimental-it strains and contorts the features, tightens the lips, wrinkles the forehead and dulls the eyes, but on the other hand where beauty is absent a certain amount of brain work will add it to the face for the eyes gain depth and earnestness, the nose becomes determined, and the shapeless lips and jaws grow powerful. Expression to be really beautiful must correspond with and enhance the individuality already expressed. Violet temper renders the eyes dry and staring, making them devoid of that clear serenity which is so charming. Concentrated thought and pessimism, jealousy or discontent, deprive the mouth of its mobility and compress the lips to a thin line in time.

Cynicism has a lasting effect on the corners of the mouth. No matter how ugly a face is, it may come to possess rugged grandeur and homely sweetness, but neither of these is to be obtained by those who frivol, vacillate or have no apprecia-tion for the higher things of life and the larger emotions. A pretty expression, a poor mind and a shallow heart

An Elderly Lady Tells of Her Cure Through the Use of Dr. Williams Pink Pills After a Score of Other Remedies Had Failed.

Dyspepsia causes more genuine dis-tress than most-diseases that afflict mankind. In this country from one cause or another, its victims are num-bered by the hundreds of thousands and those afflicted always feel tired, worn out and miserable, and are sub-ject to fits of melancholy or ill temper without apparent cause. It is obvious that the human body, in or-der to perform its functions, must be der to perform its functions, must be properly nourished, and this cannot be done when the food is improperly digested. Those who suffer from in-digestion should exercise care as to diet, and only easily digested foods should be taken. But more than this is required — the blood needs atten-tion in order that the stomesh may should be taken. But more than this is required—the blood needs attention in order that the stomach may be strengthened and the secretion of the gastric juices properly carried on. There is no other medicine offered the public that will act so promptly and effectively as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Froof of this is given in the case of Mrs. F. X. Doddridge, St. Sauveur, Que. In conversation with a reporter, Mrs. Doddridge said:—"For quite a number of years I have been a terrible sufferer from dyspepsia, accompanied by the sick headaches that almost invariably come with this trouble. I suffered from terrible pains in the stomach, bloating and belching wind. All food seemed to disagree with me, and as a result of the trouble, I was very much run down, and at times I was unable to do even light housework. I am sure I tried a secone of different medicines. even light housework. I am sure I tried a score of different medicines, tried a score of different medicines, but without success, and as I am sixty years of age, I had come to believe that it was hopeless to expect a cure. A friend who had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with good results, urged me to try this medicine, and my husband brought home a couple of boxes. Before they were finished, I felt much better, and we then got another half dozen boxes, and these have completely restored my health, and I not only feel better than I have done for years, but actually feel younger. I very cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to similar sufferers.

There are some women who seem to be perennially youthful. The grown daughters are companions as well as children, and the color in the mother's children, and the color in the mother's cheeks, the brightness in her eyes, the roundness of her form, all speak of abounding health. What is her se-cret? She is at the middle age of life when so many women are worn, wasted and faded, and yet time has only ripened her charms. The secret of this matronly health and beauty may be told in the brief phrase, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The general health of woman is so intimately related to the local health of the delicate. lated to the local health of the delicate womanly organs, that where these are diseased, the whole body must suffer. "Favorite Prescription" dries the de-bilitating drains, heals ulceration and inflammation, cures female weakness and imparts to the delicate female organs natural vigor and vitality.
