In Life's Brief Days.

In these brief days we know

Each from his soul their lesson contemplating Swiftly, we learn, as on our way we go,

These are no times for halting,

No swift the hours from dawn to twilight's eke,

Of tender comradeship so great the need,

Oh, but the loss of any hour goes by Darkened with hate, when love for love should plead!

Each holds a task, for fate's whims compelling,

Surely it is in this guide we should go,

Leaving our kind, but halting,

Love the thing, walking out the end

To cry that we have let these live so loosely—

Oh, but the play of life we need!

If, for hate's sake, love means reproaching only!

The Storm-Sermon.

Young Rev. Sylvanus H. Randall looked out of the window from the breakfast table, and a frown peered out of his eyes, preparatory to occupying the outside of his forehead.

'Another rainy Sunday morning,' he groaned, 'and we shall probably have some twenty or thirty hearers in a church building that will hold five hundred. Here is the fifth rainy Sab-both for a month'—(which was true for the month in which our story opens, was one of those that contain five of God's good days.)

'Maybe it will clear up yet, Syl,' chirped his pretty little wife, eating daintily one of the two eggs which they felt they could afford for breakfast. For they were poor, and their salary contained only three figures—two of which were ciphers and the other not so very much larger. 'Maybe a good Providence will temper the wind to a shorn pastor and his wife.'

'No, Bess,' replied the young divine.

'Providence never stops the rain at the beginning of the year, when it begins to do this morning. I was up watching it. I wanted a good audience today, and a good collection that would help us along with our church expenditures, for they are awfully behind. It's discouraging to a fellow who feels as if he were good enough for a large city church, to be dropping away in this little old town.'

Madame Bess, who, although predictable was also sensible and pious, laid down her egg spoon and went around to where her husband was sitting.

She considered him a genius, as many a wife does a husband, whether justly or not; and she held that there are times when penitence need 'taking up and setting down' again, as she sometimes expressed it. She knelt by him and playfully took one of his ears believing her white thumb and finger.

'Look here young man,' she said, in a mild but firm little voice of her own,

'of course you and I both know that you're as good as anybody that walks up and down a pulpit stair. And I don't think so because I'm your wife, because I said so before we were married—before I even fell in love with you. But don't you know that you are just as much work here in the sight of God as you can in the city?

Somebody—I forgot his name, but God knows it, you may be sure—spent a long time getting one man converted; and that boy was Moffat, the great African missionary. Did

What's in McClure's.

A striking feature of the August McClure's—one that will be widely discussed—is an essay on 'Prohibition and Social Psychology,' by Prof.

Richard C. Cabot, an eminent physician of Boston, analyzes one hundred 'Christian Science Cures,' declaring that Christian Science treatment does not cure organic diseases.

The 'Reminiscences of Carl Schurz' continue, with an intensely interesting account of two interviews between the author and Bismark, in 1867; and Ellen Terry, in her memoirs, tells of her last years with Henry Irving. In fiction there are a half-dozen stories, every one of which possesses exceptional merit: 'A Story of Hate,' by Gertrude Hall; 'Patry Moran, the Book, and Its Covers,' by A. S. Hoffman; 'His Need of Miss Simons,' another Eekiel story, by Lucy Pratt;

'The King of the Baboons,' by Perceval Gibbon; 'The Forged Coligan-es,' by Margaret Wilson; 'The Moving Finger Writes,' by Marie

Belle Lowndes.

Baby's Great Danger

During Hot Weather.

More little lives are lost during the hot weather than at any other time of the year, diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera, infantum and stomach troubles coming without warning, and when a medicine is not at hand to give promptly the short delay too frequently means that the child has passed beyond aid.

During the hot weather, months

Baby's Own Tablets should be kept at hand, for there are small children will prevent stomach and bowel troubles. Or if the trouble comes on, Baby's Own Tablets should be given at once. They are sold by the pharmacist, or by mail at 25 cents a box from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co.,

Brookville, Ont.

The Hen and the Doorknob.

Once upon a time there was a fool hen who sat on a china doorknob for three weeks expecting to get a family.

The only thing she did get was experience.

The advertising field is full of 'chick doorknob propositions'—examples of merchants who expect good newspapers to hatch money out of bad egg business, or who put sound nest egg under the wrong 'advertising hen.'

There are three principles to follow in an advertising campaign: First of all, find a business that will stand advertising; secondly, find the newspaper that will make the advertising pay; thirdly, give the newspaper time to pay.

You can't start in to breed dollars in less time than it takes to hatch them any more than you can pull a hen off the nest before she has had chance to incubate. In both cases you simply waste what has been invested.

If you stop too soon you will get a totten egg instead of a chicken.

Advertise something out of which you may reasonably expect returns and when you have found what to advertise take care that you place your copy in a newspaper that can turn the trick. Don't delude yourself with a chick doorknob, and don't confuse a ## vacation for the far near.

If we consider not the worker but work, then a man's need for a vacation is measured by the laboriousness of his duties, the time and exertion which he expends upon them, and the lack of cheering and recreating influences in his surroundings. The farmer's life, though one of independence and immunity from temptation, is also one of long hours and hard drudgery.

Though the farmer breathes purer air and gazes daily upon clearer skies than many of his brother mortals, he must leave home to become fully a ware of it. Though perhaps he looks upon that part of the handiwork of
