-Recent events have served to rouse British farmers to the desirability of paying increased attention to the breeding of horses inorder to meet the requirements of the British army. Canadians will note this fact with interest in view of the visit recently paid to the Dominion by the British officers deputed to by the British officers deputed to ascertain the capabilities of the various Provinces to assist in meeting this home demand. At the Spring Horse Show of the Royal Agricultural Society special attention is being paid to this question, while the Hackney Society and Hunter Improvement Society of the United Kingdom are also doing United Kingdom are also doing everything in their power to en-courage British farmers to employ their capital in the same direction Hitherto, as is well known, the British army authorities have been compelled to draw upon the foreign supply to find horses suited for their purpose. This foreign supply is now rapidly becoming of no avail while in any case every one is agreed in condemning the system. The suggestion that Canada, and perhaps some other Colonies, should supply the deficiencies of the Mother Country in time of need, which led to the visit to Canada of the British officers, has not, it is true, resulted in the promise of adequate immediate help in this direction. Canadians may, how-ever, see in the present condition of things ample encouragement to pay particular attention to this branch of agriculture, feeling sure that they may in time look for a fairly steady market and a remunerative return
