The Larmer's Corner.

The Honest Farmer.

Happy I count the farmer's life, Its various rounds of wholesome toil; An honest man with loving wife, An offspring native to the soil.

Thrice happy, surely !- in his breast Plain wisdom and the trust in god; His path more straight from east to wes Than politician ever trod.

His gain's no loss to other men; His stalwart blows inflict no wound; Not busy with his tongue or pen, He questions truthful, sky and ground

Partner with seasons and the sun, Nature's co-worker; all his skill Obedience, even as waters run, Winds blow, herb, beast, their laws fulfi

A vigorous youthhood, clean and bold; A manly manhood, cheerful age; His comely children proudly hold Their parentage best heritage.

Unhealthy work, false mirth, chicane, Guilt,-needless woe, and useless strife, O cities, vain, insane, insane!-How happy is the farmer's life! -Fraser's Magazine, the old fashioned current is! It survives neglect, bears fruit with regularity, never winter-kills nor mildews, resists the competition of weeds and the robbery of grass, and with a little help will triumph over its few enemies. And then how grateful it is to the taste, and how nealthful to the system, with its sparkling acid, and its rare sweet that is not too sweet! What the apple is to fruits, the current is to berries sturdy, faithful, reliable, easily grown health-giving. And yet the corrant repays care as well as the daintiest berry; and the choice, large, new varieties show that it is susceptible of improvement. Take the form in which it is most commonly grown—the bush—and cut out the old stocks, thin out the splinlling growths, cut back the vigorous shoot so as to make them stock; hoe them as clean as von would a row of strawberries; give them all the old chips from the woodyard, with a mixture of ashes and manure; and you will be surprised to see how the quantity and quality of the berries will be increased .-That destructive pest, the current worm, can be destroyed, and the bushes preserved in all their greenness, for a few shillings' expense and by a very little care. A little powdered white hellebore sifted over the bushes when the worms first appear, with an additional dusting at their up re-appearance for four or five times during the season, will do the business effectually. We have preserved a splendid row of currants for years. in this way. The fruit is best start- and in a prompt and satisfactory manner ed by slips, either root, or fresh cuts and grows quickly. La Versailles, Red Dutch, and Victoria, are the best sorts, and the White Grape adds a more pleasant variety. Set four feet apart, and mulch in dry weather .-

Golden Rule. A BALKY HORSE .- In your last paper was a good article about balky horses which reminds me of a successful ex- Furniture Cleaned & Repaired. periment made by the writer's father some years ago. He bought a valuable horse that was offered at a very low figure, whose only fault was being notoriously balky, believing kindness would cure him. One pleasant morning the horse was put before a waggon, and my father, seated in it, took the reins and bid the horse go. He started and went about a mile, when he stopped and looked around towards the waggon, intimating, as far as looks could express the idea, that he could go no farther.

My father said, well, we will see which can stand it out the longest. And there the horse stood for two hours, occasionally looking round as if dissatisfied; but as often as the horse was mildly urged to go on, be would respond in the negative in the best way he could. It was a test as between the will of the horse and the patience of the driver. At last the hoise was heartily sick of his experiment, and started off in good earnest, and was allowed to go about half a then be offered at PUBLIC AUCTION, at a control of the propries. mile when he was turned towards 12 o'clock noon, in front of the pres home and put into the stable. The next day the trial was repeated, with similar experience, except that the horse stopped about an hour. The third day's trial was like the two previous ones, but reducing the time to half an hour, and this was the last time he was ever known to balk. The fact was, the animal broke his own will and cured himself .- New fro York Observer.
