SATURDAY, OCT. 20, 1900.

THE CANDIDATES.

A. T. Wood and J. V. Teetzel are two candidates for Parliament, of whom any constituency in the Dominion might be proud. Mr. Wood is the leading merchant of the city, and a heavy investor in manufactures. He has, during the last forty years, put his money into engine and boiler works, bridge works, cotton mills, iron smelting works, etc., and at this moment he is working earnestly and paying out money for the success of the nickel steel works upon which Hamilton bases her hopes of permanent superiority as the hub of Canadian manufacturing industry. In the actual management of these several enterprises he has taken the closest personal interest, working early and late for their success. He has been three times elected to Parliament by the citizens of Hamilton, and Hamilton never had a better representative. Financially independent and naturally aggressive, he has made it his business to see that no constituency could get along without him. He was not only the government of the day, it was not by accident that large government contracts for clothing, for scales, etc., came to Hamilton firms, the filling of which gives employment to our people. The workingmen of Hamilton had in Mr. A. T. Wood a powerful friend at court, and they simply cannot afford to dispense with his services at this time, for there is not the shadow of a doubt that the Laurier government will continue in office during the next Parliamentary term.

J. V. Teetzel has not had Parliamentary experience, but he is no novice in public life. He has been Mayor of Hamilton for nearly two years, and his untiring industry and perfect efficiency have been thoroughly demonstrated. No man ever filled the Mayor's chair more acceptably. He has been the leading spirit in the acquisition of Dundas Park, in the provision of good roadways and sidewalks, in the improvement of waterworks, and he has answered every call, great and small, for the presence of the Mayor at social and official functions. A good speaker, a leader in his profession, a most affable and courteous gentleman, Mr. Teetzel is known and liked by everybody, and he lacks no qualification to make him a useful and influential colleague of Mr. Wood in the House of Commons.

Against these two Liberal candidates the Conservatives have put up Mr. Samuel Barker and Mr. F. C. Bruce, the former a man of great ability, but one to whom Hamilton is indebted for nothing at all. With wealth and leisure at his command he has served the city in no public capacity, it is except the presidency of the Jockey Club, and he has made few friends outside of the inner circle of the Tory machine. Mr. Barker is hand in glove with the Tupperes, and if he were elected he would be an influential member of the Opposition in Parliament, for he has a plenty of push when his own interests or those of his beloved Tory party are at issue. But Hamilton does not want a representative sitting in opposition in the next House, when she has a chance to elect two able men to support the Government which has done and will continue to do so well for her. The second Tory candidate, Mr. Bruce, is a negligible quantity. His vote would count one in Parliament, and his little jokes might amuse a select gathering in the Tory smoking room. He possesses none of the elements which go to make a successful public man, and he is too old to begin at the bottom and work up. Any votes Mr. Bruce may get will be due to his Tory label, and to his standing as a jolly good fellow. If elected he could do no harm to the Government and no good to the Opposition in debate, and as soon as he is tired of the novelty of life at Ottawa, he would wish himself out of Parliament, as Mr. Ryckman did when he tried the experiment of fitting a square peg into a round hole.

Two men must be chosen from these four on November 7th, to represent Hamilton at Ottawa, and to take charge of the many items of business which Hamiltonians will have to transact with the Departments. The issue is not whether Mr. Teetzel said this or that at Paris, or whether Sir Wilfrid Laurier should or should not have sent Canadian troops to Africa before war was declared. Hamilton is a business city, needing business men, having the ear of the Government, to do her people's work and to safeguard their interests. For that purpose, Messrs. Wood and Teetzel are incomparably the better men.

So, now it is reported that the emergency rations were not left behind at De Aar, as the letters credited to Morrison stated, but were duly used and served the purpose, when other emergency rations had been injudiciously eaten as a sweetmeat. Morrison's friends should see that he is taken to task for his nefarious work.

R. Alfred Jones, a Toronto barrister, is going to run against Hon. William Patterson in North Brant. No local man could be got to forfeit the deposit.

THE RASCALS STILL THERE.

In 1897 the Montreal Star had some advice for the Tory party. It wanted it reformed, reorganized, and supplied with some new leaders. Some of the old ones it said should go to the gallows; they were dis-trusted, and with good reason. Here are some of its opinions given on July 21st, 1897: "Never did a political party so much deserve, never did a political party so much need, a booting as the Conservative party deserved and needed out at the time of the last federal election. The Conservatives were distrustful of each other, disloyal to their leaders, and among them were men who were quite right to distrust each other. "Before long there must be a great reconstruction of the Conservative party, and the exigencies of the situation may as well be recognized at once. Some of the old leaders can never be leaders again, and now is the time to get rid of them. "If the Conservative party is to command the respect and confidence of the country it must have leaders worthy of respect and confidence. "The reconstruction will involve not only the getting rid of some of the old leaders, but the selection of new ones."

The "leaders" referred to were Sir Charles Tupper, Sir Charles Hibbert, Tupper, Bowell, Haggart, Caron, Wallace, Foster, Montague, Taylor, etc. Every man of them is there yet. None of them has repented or reformed. The Star is diligently supporting them. Why?

A POLICY OF RETALIATION.

Mr. John Charlton, in his address to the electors of North Norfolk, says:

"It will become necessary, in my opinion, if no remedy can be found through the removal of American restrictions, and if that nation continues towards us its policy of buying little and selling much, to adopt the remedy, years ago forestalled by Sir John A. Macdonald, and re-echoed by the Conservative party. If the American trade policy towards us continues to be repressive and entirely unresponsive to our own moderate and liberal policy, I believe the change, which is proposed, should be a radical one, and that we would be warranted in adopting the American standard of 50 per cent. duty, leaving upon the list of course, antirustic coal, raw cotton, and such articles as our own interests required to permit the free importation of duty within a reasonable period of time. This rebate would at once apply to Great Britain, and would be a statutory offer to the United States, which would produce more effect in the direction of promoting reciprocal trade relations, in my opinion, than any other policy we could adopt. These propositions, of course, are of a general character and if the principle is adopted, the details will require to be carefully wrought out with an eye only to the promotion of our own interests."

A rebate of 40 per cent. off a 50 per cent. duty would leave 30 per cent. net, which is not far from the general rate now collected at the Canadian customs houses upon manufactures imported from the United States. We have not much faith in the beneficial effect of retaliatory duties, but there is a good deal of human nature in the suggestion to hit back at the fellows who won't quit pounding you. Mr. Charlton will, of course, be elected in North Norfolk, and his suggestion will receive from the Laurier Government all the consideration to which its importance entitles it.

It is quite true that Tarte turned informer, and that McGreevy was punished; it is quite true that Langevin was retired. And in these two happenings we have the difference between the Conservative and the Liberal party. When a Conservative having deals with a Conservative government goes wrong, that government punishes him, but when a Grit friend of a Grit government is shown to be crooked he is made much of, and every Grit newspaper in the country flirts his defense.

But if Tarte saved his own skin by peaching on his pals, is it to his credit? Is there no honor among thieves?—The Spectator.

That a big "M" Mr. Tarte did not "save his own bacon" by informing on the Tory thieves; he was not concerned in their crimes, save to the extent of learning of them and bringing to punishment the men the Spectator glorifies. He did so, and quit the party when it was strong, when, as he boasted, it was "on a dividend-paying basis." Therein lies the explanation of the fiendish hatred the boodle element of the Tory party entertains for him. The Spectator could forgive a Tory blunder, but a successful Tory thief, but the man who exposed the robbers of the people, never. No falsehood is too strong for it to utter against him; no meanness is too low for it to stoop to in its insane effort to asperse him. But this country is not peopled by a majority of men so lost to principle as to approve its course, as the ballot will show.

Tarte opposed to the utmost of his power the sending of Canadian troops to Africa, and only the other day he expressed the hope that there would soon be enough Frenchmen in Canada to wrest the colony from the British crown, and turn it into an independent French nation—The Spectator.

Mr. Tarte is as justly accused of saying that as the Spectator would be accused of saying that it desired to make a living by burglary and murder. And the Spectator knows it.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Better late than never. Get your name on the voters' list to-night, before it is too late.

If you have not already registered, register to-night. Every vote for good government will count on November 7th.

For the first time since Confederation the public debt is on the decline. During the last fiscal year it decreased about $2,000 a day.

Tarte exposed and brought to justice eminent Tory politicians who were robbing their country. Therefore the Spectator maligns him, lies about him and cries "Down with Tarte!" The thief and his pals always hate the officer who nails them.

A returned army surgeon tells a newspaper man that Lord Roberts is suffering from a serious form of illness, which will be long and end his career. Millions will hope that the story is untrue, and that the gallant soldier will long wear his well-earned honors.

The London Free Press says Sir Richard Cartwright supports the present tariff, which is "substantially that of the N. P." Then what is the meaning of all the Tory clamor about the Liberals having "smashed the N. P." and "knocked down the wall of protection, etc.?"

It may not be known to many of the present generation that Sir Frederick Cartwright, whose death is announced in another column, was a Hamilton merchant more than fifty years ago. His dry goods store was located on King street, just west of the Bank of Commerce building.

Mr. Gellay, the Tupper candidate in Belcheres, bitterly denounces Sir Wilfrid Laurier for sending help to Britain's army fighting the Boers, and solicits votes for the Tupper party, "which is not tinged with this imperialism so dear to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his friends." What does the Spectator say to that sort of thing?

The Independent Executive of Souths has issued a circular intimating that having heard Sir Hibbert Tupper and Mr. Stifton at their Brandon meeting it strongly advises the electors to work for the election of Mr. Stifton. That is one of the results of the face-to-face meeting of the champions. Will Sir Hibbert please do it some more?

The Mail and Empire has a report that Mr. Joseph Sengier, the distiller, will be elected by acclamation in North Waterloo, Mr. Pitters, the Liberal candidate, having decided to retire, in consideration of a Liberal being allowed to occupy the seat in the Legislature for the remainder of the term. Deals of that kind are seldom expedient.

Mr. H. H. Cook continues to write letters to Laurier instead of naming that $10,000 man. In this case one name would be worth a ton of talk—Ottawa Journal.

Mr. Cook can't escape the issue. The public expects him to back his assertions with evidence, and to do it quickly too. Every day's delay puts him lower in the estimation of the public—even of the Tory public.

Sir Wilfrid's denial that "either he or any of his colleagues in the Government ever made a demand on H. H. Cook for a money for a Senatorship" does not help. Who ever thought that Sir Wilfrid would make the demand in person or through a Minister, even such an one as Tarte? That business is done by the party broker—Ottawa Citizen.

With all due humility and conceding the Citizen's superior knowledge of the machinery and methods of buying and selling offices, permit us to remark that Sir Wilfrid denies for himself or his colleagues, "directly or indirectly." Can he do more?

Mr. Maclean, of the Toronto World, objects to being called to account for the lapses from truth of the political writers in his paper. He complains that he is the mark for newspaper "snipers," that being the term he applies to those who direct attention to the grosser falsehoods of which the World is the medium. He says: "Of course, W. P. Maclean writes every paragraph, line and letter in the World, even when he is in bed sick or asleep, or at Ottawa fighting the battles of the people." Mr. Maclean cannot in that way escape responsibility. His duty is to set himself right by publicly exposing the falsehoods and apologizing for them. As long as he chooses to pay for the Montreal Star's fabrications and turn reports of meetings into mere travesties he must bear the blame. Repentance—turning away from the evil—his only course, would he escape the censures.

The Toronto Mail and Empire declares that when it "contemplates the amazing strides by which our neighbors are advancing on the British market" it is able to estimate "the Government's neglect." This is very cheeky, especially when it is considered that under the Tories our trade with Britain was yearly declining. It gives figures purporting to show that the Canadian sales to Britain have risen from $62,717,941 in 1896 to $82,528,061 in 1900; but says the U. S. sales to Britain rose from $105,741,339 in 1896 to $333,829,374 in 1900. We have not at hand the figures from official sources, but supposing the figures to be correct they show that the percentage of increase has been about 31%. And it must be borne in mind that it took time to reverse the decline that marked Tupper's regime. The increase in the last years of Liberal rule was great. In the two years 1899 and 1900 our exports to Britain

Aggregated less than 86 1/2 millions; in 1898 and 1899 they aggregated over 204 millions. But catch the Mail giving these figures!

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is described by the Tory organs as having deserted free trade, and again with being an income tax trader, which is it? Or is it either?—Hamilton Times.

Yes, that's the question. What is he? We all know that he went into power pledged to a reform of the tariff that would remove the last vestige of protection. We all know that he has given the country a tariff, whatever it may be called, is really a protective tariff. It is therefore very pertinent to ask why is Sir Wilfrid's policy, or is it either?—Hamilton Times.

Has he done anything toward reforming the tariff? The Express will, in honesty, grant that he has. In reforming the tariff was he not in duty bound to go carefully and with due regard to the safety of interests affected and has he not done so? That the Express will probably grant also. Then should he have proceeded more rapidly? Perhaps it will not say so; at least many people think not. Then, if Laurier's Government has implemented the pledge to reform the tariff, and has done it so far with wisdom and success, there is no doubt as to its policy, and it should be permitted to continue its beneficent work.

A Religious Paper's View. Sir Wilfrid Laurier enjoys an unique popularity, not only in Canada but in the Motherland. It looks as if the Liberals, under his leadership, will again sweep the country; and, indeed, the non-partisan onlooker, there seems to be no good reason for a change. The country is prosperous, the manufacturing interests were never more so. It is not claimed that the change of Government, just now, would result in a better or more economical administration of public affairs.—Dominion Presbyterian.

William Haddow, of Drayton, was caught in the machinery of the tile yard and fatally injured.

SIR RODERICK CAMERON. An Eminent Canadian Dies in London.

Sir Roderick Cameron, a native of Canada, who has long resided in New York, died yesterday in London, aged 75. Sir Roderick was the son of Duncan Cameron, of Glen Nevis, Invernesshire, Scotland, and was born at Glen Nevis, Canada, on July 25th, 1825. He was educated in the district schools of Cornwall and Kingston. His youth having been passed in Canada, he came to New York in 1856, with the intention of taking passage for Australia. He changed his plans, and instead intended his small capital in the charter of the ship Revenue, which, sailing in June, 1852, was the pioneer of the Australian line, which has existed since that time, its business growing to large proportions.

Mr. Cameron was married in 1846 to Miss Cumming, of Quebec, She died not long after, and in 1861 he married Anne Leaveworth, of New York. In 1849 and 1850 he was a delegate to Washington from Canada to advocate a reciprocity treaty. For his services in promoting trade between Canada and Australia the honor of knighthood was conferred on him by Queen Victoria in 1883.

He was Vice-President of the Canadian Club of New York and a member of the Turf, Carlton, and Junior and Wellington Clubs in London, and of the Knickerbocker, Metropolitan, New York Yacht and other clubs of New York. Sir Roderick was a turfman, will be remembered chiefly through his ownership of the famous horse "Camington."

Prince Consort. London, Oct. 19.—A Times special from The Hague says:

The Dutch Government will bring in a bill to regulate the position of the future husband of Queen Wilhelmina, in imitation of the precedent set by Queen Victoria. Her Majesty will confer upon Duke Henry the rank of Prince Consort and the title of Royal Highness.

SECTION FOREMAN'S SUICIDE. C. P. R. Employee Shoots Himself Through Body With a Rifle.

Brookville, Ont., Oct. 19.—Word has been received here that Wm. Campbell, of Wolford Crossing, section foreman on the C. P. R. from Bell's Crossing to Irish Creek, committed suicide by shooting himself through the body with a rifle. He had been over the road, and, returning, went into the house, and, after a few minutes conversation with his wife, went into the bedroom. A minute or two later he heard the gun go off, and, on entering the room, found that her husband had shot himself.

Decoded was about 58 years of age, and leaves a widow and family of four children.
