Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

TURNING ONE'S FAMILY INSIDE OUT.

RUTH CAMERON

To refuse to admit to an outsider that any member of one's family has a fault or could be in the wrong in anything is family loyalty carried to an extreme that I at least think unjustifiable. But there is another attitude at the end of the scale which, though common, is just as annoying. I mean that of the person who makes a point of perfect frankness about all his family's faults and foibles and even drags out the family skeleton before an audience half interested, half embarrassed.

I have lately been thrown into contact with an unusually notable example of this.

Here are some of the things she says—not just to intimate friends, in confidence, but to anyone who cares to listen.

This is the Way She Talks About Her Sister's Playing.

She has a sister who plays fairly well on the mandolin. She is often asked to play and evidently enjoys doing it and thinks herself a passable performer, which she is. After listening to her one day M— said to me, "Too bad Grace can't play the mandolin when she wants to so much."

Speaking of the children of another sister, "Of course, you know Emily's children are dreadfully spoiled. Emily never was meant to have children. She hasn't the faintest idea in the world how to bring them up. I wouldn't be a bit surprised to see Harry (her nephew) land in a reform school."

She Calls Her Mother Unpatriotic.

When I asked her about her mother one day she said, "Oh, mother's deep in dressmaking as usual. I think it is terrible for a woman of her age to think as much of clothes as she does. Why all through the war it was as much as I could do to get her to knit a little."

The one real skeleton in the family is a brother who was mixed up in an unpleasant divorce suit. M— insists upon referring to this affair openly and even telling the details.

When one knows her intimately one finds that she really has a very deep affection for her family. But anyone who knew her casually would never pierce through her pose and would think she had a very undesirable family that she didn't care much about.

Be Frank About Yourself First.

Frankness is a very fine thing in its right uses but I cannot feel that turning one's family inside out for outsiders to laugh or be shocked at is one of them.

If you want to turn yourself inside out that is one thing (though one often sees that carried too far for good taste) but surely before you proceed to your family you ought to consider their feelings and the fact that there is a certain noblesse oblige about reticence in family matters.

English Physician Calls Prohibition Absolute Nonsense.

Philadelphia, June 19.—Prohibition is absolute nonsense, Sir St. Clair Thompson, noted English physician, declared here to-day. Dr. Thompson was a representative of the British Medical Association to the convention of the American Medical Association at Atlantic City. In company with other physicians, he is making a tour of the medical centres of the United States.

"The arbitrary denial of all alcoholic stimulants could not and never would be done in England, and I am sure it would not be successful here," he said. "Aside from the fact that it is not a wise measure medically, it is autocratic and revolutionary. Men of all nations from the beginning of time have used alcoholic drinks as a stimulant. Used in moderation, it is a good thing. Deny it to all on account of the excesses of a few, and the people will take to opium, hashish, tobacco in excess or other drugs. It will certainly drive a great many good people from the United States to other countries."

WILLIAM OSWALD'S DISCOVERY.

When William Oswald Effingham was born his parents said: There never was a child before with such a noble head. With pardonable modesty they raved about his worth. And called their precious little tot the cutest babe on earth.

As William Oswald older grew his folks more loudly raved. Before his face they praised to all the way that he behaved. They told the clever things he did, repeated all he said. Until at last they had completely turned the youngster's head.

Because he heard his parents brag about him day and night. He got to thinking that he was the brightest of the bright. He didn't seem to notice when they gave him his degree. That ninety other fellows shared his brilliant company.

At last into the world he went in search of gold and fame. And was shocked to find that no one seemed to recognize his claim: It troubled him and grieved him and it left him much depressed. To discover no one thought him any better than the rest. Now he knows that there are others who can do what he can do. That some know everything he knows, with something added too. And he tells his foolish parents when they boast of him at night. That the world is full of people who are marvelously bright.

It is economy for the business woman who must wear her skirt more than her coat to have every suit made with two skirts.

Any food can be cooled without ice by wrapping the jar containing it in a wet cloth and exposing the whole to a current of air.

Household Notes.

When sewing up sheets, don't cut into two until the seams are sewed over and over.

Lettuce for sandwiches should be thoroughly washed and only the small leaves selected.

Varnish shelves and the inside of pantry drawers after cleaning. They will clean easier.

Grease can be removed from wall paper by rubbing with flannel moistened with alcohol.

When a flower vase is too deep, twist some paper in a loose roll and stuff in the bottom.

Add a cupful of vinegar to water in which colored clothes are washed. This prevents running.

To test the heat of an oven, put a bit of white paper in it. If too hot, the paper will blacken.

Rolling up children's socks stretches them at the top and makes them fall down when worn.

When boiling a cracked egg, add some vinegar to the water to prevent the white from boiling out.

Chicken-and-lamb stew is one of the dishes which can very easily be prepared in a fireless cooker.

To keep sandwiches fresh, wrap them in a napkin in hot water, wrap them in it and put in a cool place.

Allow at least three Turkish towels for each member of the family when planning towel supplies.

When lard has been spilled on wood dash cold water on to prevent the grease from soaking in.

Coffee gelatin and junket broken and served with cream in the same individual dishes make a pleasing dessert.

Witty Toasts.

Here are a few witty and amusing toasts given at banquets:

One rather cynical toast ran thus: "Woman—she requires an eulogy; she speaks for herself."

At the wedding breakfast of a deaf and dumb couple, the guest, in the speech of the evening, wished them "unspeakable bliss."

At another gathering were toasted: "The Bench and the Bar: if it were not for the bar, there would be little use for the Bench."

The following was proposed at a shoemakers' dinner: "May we have all the women in the country to shoe, and all the men to boot."

A young man referred to one member of the sex he eulogised as "a defective deer: so sweet that honey would blush in her presence, and treacle stand appalled."
