"Do you expect electric engines entirely to explain a paper on "The Limitations of Steam and Electricity." Mr. Croby enters very fully into the relative cost of power and operating expenses, under various conditions, and puts forward some very interesting and instructive data. The conclusions arrived at are reasuring to those who have hithertochad feeble faith as to the ultimate supersession of steam by electricity for long-distance traction. Mr. Croby points out the difficulties which lie in the way, and indicates just as clearly the remedies for those difficulties. DAMS SWELT AWAY.

Greenwood, Onto, June 7.—The worst freshet ever known here occurred Thursday evening. For two nights terrific thunder storms raged. Four small dams north of here gave way and the flow of water carried away T. L. Green's large dam. The new dam and the race broke away and the dam of the Oatmeal Milling Company. Roads were submerged and gutted, cellars flooded, bridges carried away and telegraph wires broken. Several have lost cattle and horses. The roads in the vicinity are in a terrible state. M. Gleeson loses heavily from hisstore cellar being of wood. The loss to W. L. Green will be from $1,500 to $2,000.

SCHOMBERG, Ont., June 7.—In consequence of the heavy rain falls here and the sweeping away of two large mill dams, this viliage was flooded. Many business and private dwellings were swept away by the flood, leaving the occupants homeless and in destitute circumstances. The total loss is estimated at $15,000 or more.

Beooklin, Ont., June 6.—Thursday's loudburst a few miles north of here caused cloudburst a few miles north of here caused the little creek that runs through the village to assume the proportions of a mighty river, and a great amount of property was destroyed. Between two concession lines there are six bridges down and roads are washed out in all directions. There is hardly a bridge or mill dam left in the township. Mr. B. Battin's barn and other outbuildings went in the flood. Mills were overturned, and Mr. C. Redman's furniture shop had a narrow escape.
