MISSION WORKERS.

Close of the Convention of the W. F. M. S. of London Presbytery.

The twelfth annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Presbytery of London, which has been in session for two days in Knox Church, St. Thomas, was brought to a close.

Wednesday afternoon's session opened with the singing of "Hail to the Lord's Anointed." Mrs. E. McMillan, of Kintyre, read the 15th Psalm, and Mrs. T. Baty, New Westminster, led in prayer. Miss Roger, returned missionary from India, gave an interesting address, after which the hymn, "The Church's One Foundation," was sung.

It was decided to hold the next meeting in London. Mrs. J. A. Macdonald was elected delegate to the General Society, which meets in Peterborough next April. A letter from Mrs. Goforth to the society was read. Mrs. Macdonald announced that Chalmers in the city had subscribed $3 to be used as the society thought best. A standing vote of thanks was passed to those who had entertained the delegates. Mrs. J. Cameron, of London, led in prayer. The doxology, "To Him That Loved the Souls of Men," was sung, and the president, Mrs. John Currie, of Belmont, brought the proceedings to a close with prayer.

BLAZE IN TORONTO.

Toronto, Jan. 31.—Fire broke out yesterday morning between three and four o'clock at Nos. 101-107 Ontario street, and did damage to the extent of $20,000. The principle loser will be John Carlyle, who owned the building burned, the loss on which is estimated at $15,000, without insurance. A number of firms occupying the building were burned out. The sufferers are Charles B. Williams, planing mill; R. B. Linton, cabinet manufacturer; Martin P. May, desk manufacturer; W. V. Brown, novelty manufacturer; T. B. Bering, contractor. Two small houses owned by Elizabeth McLellan, adjoining the burned buildings were damaged by water. There was no insurance on the property damaged or destroyed.

Liberal History.

Address by Dr. C. T. Campbell Before the Liberal Club.

Strong Stand Taken for Civil and Religious Liberty All Through Canadian History by the Liberal Party —An Interesting Speech.

The Young Liberal rooms last evening was the scene of the usual monthly gathering of members and friends. The principal speaker of the evening was Dr. C. T. Campbell, who delivered a most interesting history of the Liberal party from the time of its inception to the present day. The rooms were crowded and a splendid musical programme was provided. Inter-spersed with the numbers were short and enthusiastic addresses by J. B. McKillop, W. J. Element, W. E. Jeffery and others. The chair was ably filled by Mr. Henry Teasdale, president of the party.

Dr. Campbell prefaced his remarks with a sketch of the conditions of affairs existing in Canada at the time of the conquest by Britain in 1759, or, rather, the treaty of Paris. Then the mistake of allowing French laws and language to have precedence in Canada was pointed out. The advent of the United Empire Loyalists was touched upon, and the subsequent formation of Upper and Lower Canada. The early differences between the governors and the legislative assemblies was detailed, and the growth of the family compact outlined. The banishment of Robert Gourlay, the foremost agitator against the organization, was severely criticised, and the treatment of him was characterized as such as would have disgraced the fiercest regions in the days of the struggle for responsible government, and as the family compact began to die out as a body with new generations instead of continuing as social dyings compact assumed the characteristics of the demagogue, and old fossilized Toryism was covered over with a supposed coating of Liberalism.

The spirit of the dying compact passed into the Conservative party, "and it has been there ever since," added the doctor.

The arrival of Sir Francis Bond Head, the new Governor, in 1836, and the corrupt election practices which followed his arrival, so exercised William Lyon Mackenzie, who was defeated in York by barefaced corruption, that he formed the ill-advised and short-lived rebellion of 1837. The speaker passed on to 1848, when Sir John A. Macdonald and a Liberal majority, responsible government was obtained. But the Liberal Ministers were inclined to be slow in carrying out needed reforms, so a portion of the party thought, and a "Clear Grit" party was formed. This party wanted universal suffrage, no property qualification for members of Parliament, free trade, direct taxation, and many other reforms.

Mr. George Brown, of the Globe, first asserted that the party was formed for separation from Great Britain, but as they became stronger and their aim more definite, Mr. Brown ultimately went in with the party. The impossibility of either party to remain in power long, owing to the evenly balanced representation from Upper and Lower Canada brought on the agitation for representation by population, and the scheme of Confederation. Both agitations were promulgated by Mr. Brown. The three most prominent men of the time who were opposed to Confederation were (then) Mr. John A. Macdonald, John Sanfield Macdonald, and Mr. Scobell. But while Sir John was the opponent of Confederation, he agreed in taking Mr. Brown into his Cabinet to adopt his views on the matter. Then the coalition of Reformers and Conservatives took place, and Confederation was assured.

"Sir John A. Macdonald has posed as the father of Confederation," said Mr. Campbell. "The biographies written by his admirers all speak of him in glowing terms of praise as the father of Confederation, and the people in Great Britain and other countries who take any interest in Canadian affairs are led to believe such to be the case. Why, he was not even its stepfather! He was the most bitter opponent of the time, and he only accepted Confederation when he found that it was only by adopting the policy of his opponents that he could retain office. This is characteristic of Conservatism as a whole—to hold things just as they are until they cannot hold them so any longer, and then step forward; to keep back as long as they can, and when they cannot keep back any longer, to change their views to suit and so retain office.

"I suppose that today the Conservative party in Canada would not hold on to the National Policy, feeling, as I am sure they must, that a great majority are opposed to it—they would be ready to drop it and adopt the Liberal policy were it not for this one simple fact: That in any country that has a protective tariff, the Government is always able to command large supplies of money to carry on campaigns from people who are interested in the protective policy. And, as it is not for this fact, you would have the Conservative party going back on the N. P., and adopting the Liberal views of tariff reform for revenue purposes only."

Turning once more to historical matters, Mr. Campbell said that it would be seen that the Liberal party, from its first inception, had struggled honestly and consistently for the liberty of the people to govern themselves, and for the right of every individual to have his say in the management of the affairs of the country. They struggled for honest, upright government, for the government of the people by the people, and they were the party of progress and the party of civil and religious liberty. (Cheers.)

The programme and other speakers followed.

Mr. B. Stockwell captured the audience with his magnificent solo and was loudly cheered. The Birmingham Bros. sang a glee, entitled "The Lifeboat Crew," and gained an enthusiastic encore.

Mr. J. B. McKillop gave a most interesting address, which met with the hearty applause of all present.

Mr. W. J. Element delivered a speech, which was extremely comic, and also contained some good points. "Billy" was greeted with such enthusiastic applause that he had to reappear and give another address.

"A Cruel Hiss" was the title of A. Greenway's song, which was well sung, and encored.

Mr. Ed Jeffery, vice-president of the Young Liberal Club for No. 2 ward, gave a most instructive address on the future of Canada. It showed deep research on the part of Mr. Jeffery, and gained the warm approval of all present.

Mr. McKeeough sang a comic song and gained an encore.

By special request Mr. B. Stockwell sang the song, "The British Lion," and repeated his former success.

Mr. H. Hanahan moved a hearty vote of thanks to the speakers and singers. Mr. A. Wanless seconded, and it was unanimously carried.

"God Save the Queen" closed the proceedings.
