JUMPED IN THE LAKE

To Escape from the Police at Toronto—A Shipwrecked Fellow.

Toronto, July 24.—The Sunday school picnic at Victoria Park yesterday afternoon had a very remarkable incident at its close. It appears that a young man named "Jack" MacGuire, who is known among his companions as "Swab" and has a slight familiarity with courts and cells, insulted and beat a young girl of 16 in the northern end of the park between 5 and 6 o'clock.

Some of the girl's companions gave the alarm, and Constables Burns and McMillane commenced a search through the crowd and finally spotted MacGuire. On seeing the officers MacGuire started to run in the direction of the lake. Constable McMillane followed him and a struggle ensued between him and the prisoner around a tree which stands at the top of one of the high and bluff overlooking the beach. The result was that all three men came rolling down the bluff. MacGuire was the first to regain his feet. He at once ran out into the lake and swam just left the end of the wharf. He was picked up by the officers of the boat and at once made a break for the coal hole, where he hid waiting for the entry of the constables.

Burns and McMillane, however, at once hastened to catch a street car for the city. Arriving at No. 1 police station they secured a posse of eight policemen with all haste, and hurried to Yonge street wharf to meet the Steinhoff, which arrived about 7:30. Constables were placed at each gang-plank to locate MacGuire among the disembarking passengers, but when the last man left the steamer not a trace of him had been seen.

The Steinhoff was then searched from keel to deck, but without success. A sharp watch had been kept on the waters of the slip, but he had evidently not escaped by swimming ashore. Finally, after a deal of fruitless search, the engineer of the boat laughingly confessed that MacGuire had jumped overboard while they were passing through the eastern gap and had swam ashore at Ward's.

Although watch was kept on the island ferries, MacGuire was not to be seen last night, and he probably discovered some new means of eluding the officers, or spent the night on the island.

MR. MCCARTHY AT HOME

Why Clarke Wallace Ran Away to Ireland.

The Curran Bridge Robbery Exposed.

Sir John Thompson's Pious Ejaculations Met and Replied To.

Not a Member of the Liberal Party, But Determined to Combat the Wrongdoing of the Men in Power.

Mr. D'Alton McCarthy, M.P., spoke at a farmers' picnic in Simcoe on Monday. Mr. McCarthy, who for years was the president of the Ontario Provincial Conservative Association, and was dubbed by Sir John Macdonald, "the brains of the Conservative party," was warmly received. Taking up first the Dominion school question, he accused the Dominion Government of postponing the consideration of their bill dealing with the Territories until Hon. Clarke Wallace got out of the country. It was brought on a week ago today, when some members who would have had to vote against the Government on pain of losing their seats had gone home, and after the Controller of Customs, the guardian of Protestantism, was out of the way. Mr. Wallace must have voted with the Government, as he could not, as the holder of a portfolio in the Administration, vote against it. It was an awkward situation, and it was decided to get out of it by waiting until he had left Canada to attend the Grand Orange Lodge. Mr. McCarthy admitted that his amendment had been defeated, but told his friends that their influence had not been lost. A petition signed by all the bishops and backed by the full power of the hierarchy, had been pigeon-holed by the Government from fear of the spirit manifested in Ontario, and a resolution which was to have been moved by one of their supporters, and which could have been carried, was suppressed by the Government owing to the same wholesome influence. He gave an explanation of his statement, about which the conservative press has been making a clamor, that he would rather have separate schools than secular schools.

A SECULAR SCHOOL SYSTEM was one from which the Word of God was excluded. This was a Christian country, and it would be a scandal, he said, if there was no opportunity given to have the religion common to the whole people taught in the schools. Although there were some people in this country who did not believe in any religion, their number was small, and it would be a terrible hardship to the people generally if the Word of God was the only book excluded from the schools. Surely, he said, there were in the Bible chapters on which all could agree and which would not promote materialism. But he was not meaning to dictate to the 66,000 people of the Northwest. He would let them do as they think best and make the choice for themselves, whether it be separate or secular schools, or the Ontario system of public schools. Speaking of the Curran bridge scandal, he characterized it as

THE WORST PIECE OF ROBBERY he had ever known since he entered public life. The amount which had been stolen was not as large as in the scandals which resulted in the throwing down of Sir Hector Langevin from his high position, but he considered the culpability of Mr. Haggart's department much greater and much plainer and much more brazen. It stood confessed that the country lost over $200,000 in that one job, and all the defense the Minister had made was that he tried to detect the robbers and could not. He had promised to punish the guilty, but more than a year had already gone by, and nothing had been done towards it. Could there be any doubt, Mr. McCarthy asked, that Mr. Haggart knew that Contractor St. Louis made contributions to the Conservative fund, and that Mr. Haggart knew in general way, although not to the full extent perhaps, what was going on, and expected that some of the money would find its way to the Quebec Conservatives? "You remember the pious ejaculation of Sir John Thompson," Mr. McCarthy said, "when he thanked God that I was no longer a member of his party. Today I thank God that I am no longer a member of that party, in which such gigantic frauds are carried on." (Applause.) Proceeding, he told his audience of the Steinhoff Island contract, the reversal of the Government's policy, the canceling of Gilbert's contract, and the payment of $30,000 to him as damages therefor, and the giving of the new work to Davis Bros., without tender.

DIRECT VIOLATION OF THE LAW. Were the people innocent enough to suppose, he asked, that that was done without an understanding with Davis Bros. with regard to election funds? It was in this way the Government provided itself with funds to bribe the country with its own money. Then there was the Tay Canal, its actual cost of $120,000, and its annual expenditure of $500,000, and its revenue of $125,76; the St. Charles branch of the Intercolonial Railway, taking between $140,000 and $160,000 a mile, or seven or eight times as much as an ordinary railway. In the face of such waste of the taxes of the country he did not wonder that the Tories were coming to the front. When these things were brought up in Parliament they were only laughed at and called chestnuts. He would not wonder if they intended to return another member instead of himself. This was said with a humorous smile, and the response came from all parts of the audience, "You're good enough," and "Stay where you are," Mr. McCarthy went on to speak of the public debt. Then

HE TURNED TO THE PREMIER and recalled his professions in 1891, that he would punish all who might be found guilty of malfeasance of office, he they high of law. "I have no great admiration for John Thompson, and he has no great much admiration for me, so that there is not much to be said between us. But I did think he was an honest man. I knew he was once a judge, and I heard his declaration in 1891. I will not say that I have changed my opinion, but I will say that I am alarmed at some things that have happened in Ottawa during the last session. No man is fit to go upon the bench unless he is above partisanship, and unless he is willing in every case to do justice between the parties in a case, no matter what their station." With this significant introduction, he briefly stated the principal points in the Turcotte case. There was no dispute as to the facts; the charges were proved in the clearest possible manner, and yet the Minister of Justice, who should be the guardian of the honor of Parliament, and his obedient majority voted out the charges and confirmed Mr. Turcotte in the seat he had forfeited, although he it said for the honor of the service party that two Ministers here—Messrs. Dickey and Weldon—to stultify themselves and voted the majority. That vote of the Minister and his followers, Mr. McCarthy said, was, to his mind,

THE MOST DISGRACEFUL VOTE that in a House not particularly for purity, has ever taken place. With regard to the French treaty voted against it because it had given a too little and France too much, carried by the largest majority of the French-Canadians it is a great thing to have a Frenchman. Every member almost who spoke against it. Dr. Montague, as a follower as any government ever spoke against it, and so did Mr. Colborne, Mr. Maclean, of East York, and Mr. H. A. Gordon, of the Opposition. What did it do? On $80,000 a year of taxes of champagne, other wines of France, and while the necessities of life. Then there was fast line. Parliament had voted $7,000,000 to it, and he had voted against it. Did they know, he asked, what fast line and what a knot was to go twenty knots an hour across the Atlantic, and if they did not strike an iceberg or run into a reef Liverpool in five days and hours. If they did not want to go so the line would carry freight. But, unfortunately for the scheme, there were all kinds of sailing out of Canada could find cargoes. What was $750,000? Well, when they reflected the controllable expenditure of the country after taking out the sum annually for debt payment and Provincial subsidies amounted to only $10,000,000 or $12,000,000, it would be seen that the scheme would make quite a hole in it. In all the fact, he had opposed the Government, he had voted so often against the Government he had earned a reputation as an old-line Conservative. He never regarded himself—as he was known to the Conservative—a free trader, party, and he was

NOT A MEMBER OF THE OPPOSITION. He was free to vote according to his own convictions and the interests of his constituents failing or lost, are restored by this vote. He had tried to find a ground between the Government and the Opposition, which he might have found, but he was not to show that with the Government, overwork, early errors, ill-health, re-keel. But, except in the case of the Government, he could last stages. Don't be disappointed if you find no occasion. (Applause and laughter.) Let us show you this branch of his speech with the de-clarist exist; here go hand in hand. Write Policyman and now I tell you that I am sealed, free. Over 2,000 references, for as much as we trade as we get. We would be the better if we could have it as it is in England. But that is impossible, and so we say that what this country needs now is to get down to a tariff for revenue. The future of Canada, he said, was in the hands of the people. He would like to see a manufacturer, but he did not believe the 90 per cent of the people should be taxed for the support of 10 per cent. In conclusion, he said it looked as though Parliament was about to be dissolved. In the expiring hours of the session the frugal Government, with a deficit in the treasury of $1,500,000, and the public employees not paid their salaries, after giving $750,000 a year to a fast line of steamers and throwing off $80,000 a year in taxes on wines, gave $4,000,000 of the people's money in bonuses to railways to go into

WILDCAT SPECULATION. Such lavish expenditure generally heralded an election. Before resuming his seat he present. He felt that he owed it to them to give an account of his stewardship, although some of them looked upon him a little coldly, he said, with a smile, because he had not been steadfast in the party faith. But he would say to them he had sooner go down in the next election, crushed by their ballots, than to gain their good-will by thick-and-thin party man, voting for what he could not approve of in his conscience and for what was not in the interests of his country. (Cheers.)

now-a-days, without Fearline. And the strange part of it is, that you should be willing to suffer, when it's only for your loss—not gain.

That needless back-breaking rub, rub, rub isn't saving you anything. It's costing you money. It's simply wearing out the things that you're washing. Why would you rather do it? That is what the women who are saving their strength and their clothes with Pearline can't understand.
