Her heart was full of love and longing for the noble young man whom she believed to be her brother, and it seemed as if she could hardly wait until he came, and yet she dreaded, with a terrible dread, the ordeal before her. She dispatched this message as she had done the other, by a servant, so that Kenneth would be sure to get it, and then tried to school herself to patience while she awaited the result. The hours seemed interminable after that. No word came to her from the sick-room, and after the repulse of the morning she and after the repulse of the morning she hrank from going to Miss Kavanagh's com without being sent for. Her heart vearned for the sufferer upstairs, and he longed to do something to comfort der; but there seemed to have arisen a barrier between them which she could not pass, even had she dared, and which

She gathered the roses that kiss Kavanagh liked best, and arranged them into a lovely bouquet to take, as a peace-offering, when she should go to her, as she knew she would have to do when Kenneth came. She ate her lunch alone, and could scarcely swallow a mouthful for the great lump in her throat. It was very tonery and sad, but she was somewhat conforted when her collie, who had followed her about all the morning, as if he realized that something was wrong, came and taid his glossy head in her lap and looke tup at her with great sympathizing eyes. She amused herself for a little whit by feeding him from her own plate, and then she went back to the library to watch the hands of the clock creep showy around toward two. slowly around toward two.

It wanted about five minutes of that hour when she espied a horseman riding up through the park. She started to her feet, her heart beating wildly, her cheeks scarlet from excitement, and seizing her bouquet darted upstairs to Miss Kavanagh's room. She tapped lightly upon the door, and was gladdened by a subdued "Come in." Entering she found her aunt up and dressed, but still looking pale and p and dressed, but still looking pale and wretched. Isabelle forgot all about the barrier as she saw her white face, and sprang to her side, a fond smile on her lips.

"You are better, auntie?" she said, laying the flowers on her lap, and throwing her arms about her neck.

Miss Kavanagh did not reply, but strained the child to her with a clasp that was almost convulsive, and Isabelle could feel that she was trembling with emotion. After a moment the woman re-leased her, and taking up the flowers inled their fragrance. I have been hungry for some roses, Miss Kavanagh threw up her hands with a gesture of despair, and surrendered. That reproachful look, that weary tone had melted her hard heart at last.

Miss Kavanagh held her close for a few minutes, then gently releasing her, and controlling herself with a great effort, she said:

"There, dear, go bathe your face to remove the traces of these tears, and then you may bring Mr. Keith to me. He will excuse me for receiving him in my boudoir, since I am far from well. Forgive your auntie, Isabelle, for making you so unhappy. If I have been a cruel woman, I have also suffered for it, and I will try to be better in the future."

With 2 load of care and misery lifted from her heart, Isabelle darted from the room, and speeding to her own chamber up to her with Kenneth's card. She took it from him and went directly to the drawing-room, saying to herself that she, would be very quiet and undemonstrative until everything had been explained; but when she saw Kenneth coming toward her with outstretched hand, and met his room, and speeding to her own chamber bathed her face as directed, tied a fresh ribbon about her hair, and then went downstairs. HOCKEY.

When two teams picked from city teams face each other, one would think that each would be sufficiently familiar with the other's tricks to furnish a good game of hockey. The St. John's
A. C. and Seventh Regiment teams failed to do this at the Jubilee rink last night, when the former were defeated by a score of 11 to 1. The advantage in weight of the soldiers and their skillful combination account for this. The St. John's men, handicapped their men, Crawford and Woolley, were no match, and consequently the game was devoid of satisfying plays. From the time the puc was faced off at 8:45 it was apparent that the Seventh team would come out on top. Most of the playing was at the St. John's goal, which was well guarded by Johns. The off-sides were unusually numerous. Kelly scored the first goal for the Seventh one minute after the start. A great deal of rough work was indulged in, and although numerous attempts were made, St. John's failed to score. Invariably the puck was brought down by McMahen or McGuffin, but the combination was extremely faulty, and with the heavy checking that met them their efforts were futile. Failing to follow up closely was also a feature of the Saints' playing, while their opponents were usually near the rubber wherever it was. Kelly and Lawlor undoubtedly proved themselves to be the fastest men on the ice. They were directly responsible for the majority of the goals scored. Lawlor's playing was scientific. Kelly's is largely based on sheer force. Sippi and Taylor back-ed them up well, Sippi scoring a goal. Their defense is a splendid one, and the team was, as they promised, the best yet put on the ice.

The Saints were weak at some points, but individually they are all good players. They made no mistake in placing Mortimore on point. When he was put off the ice several goals were scored, and when he returned the tallies stop-ped. Woolley, who was unable to play, was missed on the forward line. The second half was a repetition of the first. The same rough playing took place, and the unchanged order of the play made the game monotonous. Fierce struggenerally resulting in the possessing of the puck by the soldiers, were numberless. Adams scored the lonely, goal for St. John's in a clever piece of combination work, aided by the other forwards. Little, at point, whose playing was rather weak in the first half, brightened up in the second and did some pretty checking.

Kelly twice made rather ungentlemanly exhibitions of himself. In the first half he deliberately attacked Mc-Eachren, of the St. John's, and struck him several blows in the face, and in second ran up against Mortimore. If the referee had not stopped the scuf-ile, possibly Kelly would have been taught a deserved lesson. This work won for him nothing but the derision and jeers of the spectators. Lawlor, with an ease that must have delighted hockey lovers, scored two goals in the last five minutes' play. Kelly also put the same number to his credit. Lawlor's playing could be set un as a model of fair hockey playing. This brought the score up to 11. St. John's did not again score.

The line-up was: St. John's-Johns, goal; Mortimore, point; Little, cover point; McMahen, McGuffin, Adams and McEachren, for-

FOUGHT CORBETT 20 ROUNDS. Hot Springs, Ark., Jan. 14 .- "Young Corbett," the featherweight champion, was given the decision over Austin Rice, of New London, Conn., tonight, in the 18th round of what was to have been a 20-round contest, before the Whitington Park Athletic Association. The fight was not to a finish, Rice staying full 17 rounds. Just before the end of this round Corbett landed a stiff left swing, glancing on the stomach, and as a result Rice was sick during the remainder of the fight. On the calling of time for the beginning of the 18th round Rice's second threw a towel into the ring and Corbett was given the decision. As a whole the fight was a disappointment. It had been freely predicted that Rice would not stay ten rounds, and most of the betting was done on this basis The feature of the contest was Rice's footwork; but for his success in dodging Corbett's vicious lunges he would have gone down and out early in the game.

California-Oregon Excursions.

Every day in the year the Chicago, Union Pacific and Northwestern Line runs through first-class Pullman and Tourist Sleeping Cars to points in California and Oregon. Three through trains daily. The route of the famous 'Overland Limited." Personally conducted excursions from Chicago to San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland and other Pacific Coast points, leaving Chicago on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays. Lowest rates. King Street, Toronto, Ont.

Members of the elevator association laid their grievances before Hon, Mr. Sifton at Winnipeg on Tuesday, and he discussed with them the desira-bility of a number of amendments proposed to the grain act. The dealers claim the act is unduly severe on them,

It Makes Strong Men

Who's the champion of this game in Canada?

A Scotch-Canadian to be sure.

Where's the Scotch-Canadian who has not been reared on Scotch-Canadian Oatmeal porridge?

Where's the one who ever grew to stalwart manhood on cold fads?

Thousands of Scotch and other

Canadians have eaten Tillson's Pan-Dried Oats all their lives. Thousands of Canadian strong men have been made strong on Tillson's good, plain wholesome Oatmeal porridge-Pan-Dried.

No hulls, no specks, no dirt, no dust-nothing but the eatable part of the oat.
