

The ADVERTISER'S PICTORIAL PAGE

A general view is shown of the courts at Chestnut Hill, where Capt. James O. Anderson of the Australians defeated Rene Lacoste, the French boy wonder.

A recent picture of Princess Mary and her baby boy, George Henry Hubert. The child is now six months old. Note the familiar features of the royal family on his face.

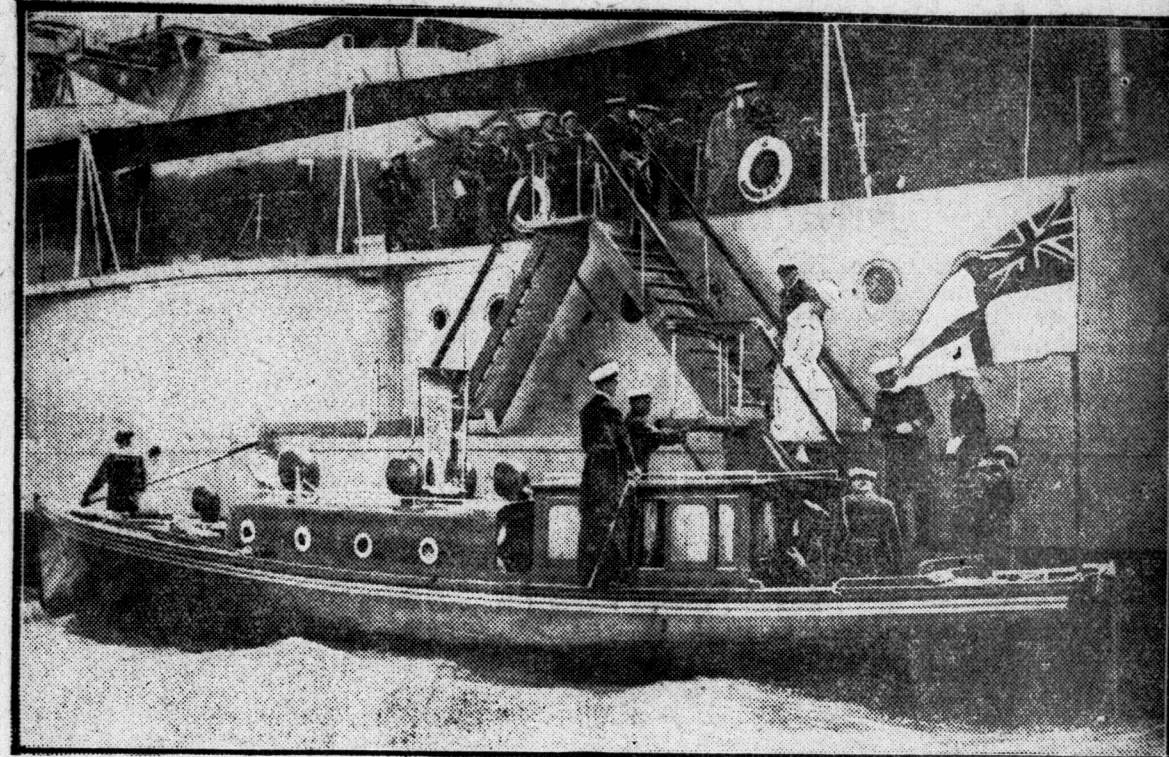

Sir David Shackleton is the chief labor adviser and one of the most noted labor leaders in Great Britain.

The Duke and Duchess of York with the camp "chief" watch athletic contests at a military camp in England.

These young ladies give a perfect exhibition of poise and balance playing catch with a huge ball while balancing on aquaplanes travelling at the rate of thirty miles an hour.

During the opening of the Cowes regatta King George and Queen Mary visited H.M.S. Barham. They are seen returning to the Royal Pinnace.

A late photograph of the Earl of Athlone, who is a brother to Queen Mary. During the world war he won great military distinction, as evidenced by his many decorations.

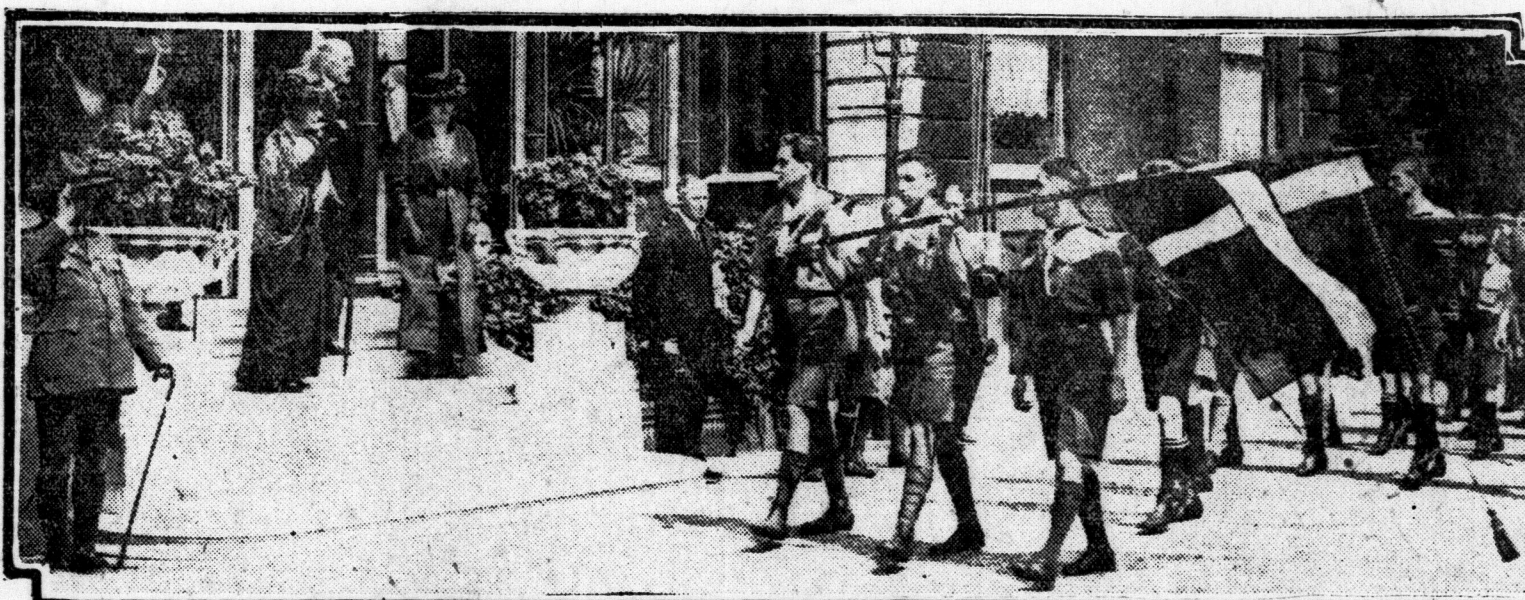

Countess Antonette Khevenhuller-Metsch of Austria has designed a banknote adopted by her country. The feminine idea of decorative banking is at last accepted by the masculine world.

Wearing the same jaunty old yachting cap, cocked rakishly over the right eye, Sir Thomas Lipton arrived in New York determined to lift the America's cup. "Of course, I'll build another challenger," announced Sir Thomas, "and I'll call her The Shamrock."

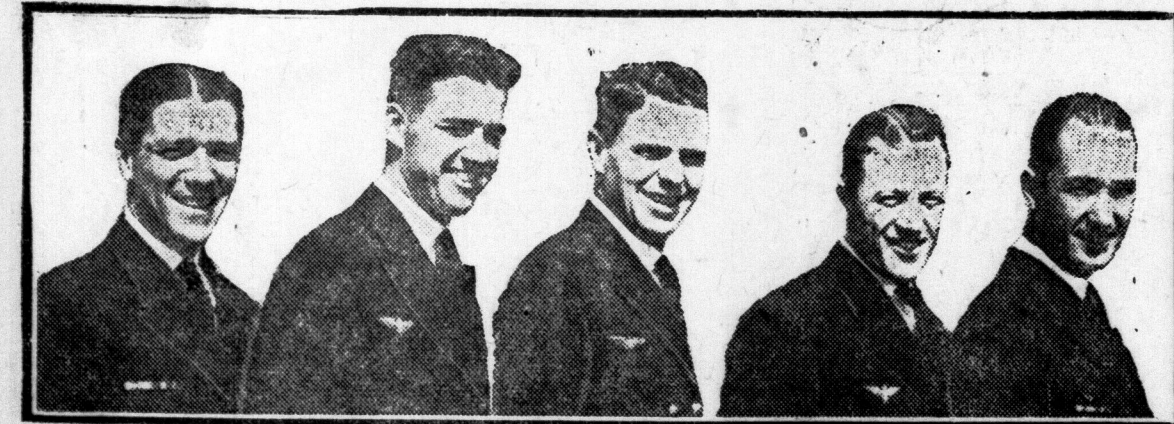

Mrs. Wallace Reid, wife of the former moving picture actor, who was said to have died from the use of dope, is making speeches from various radio stations against the use of narcotics.

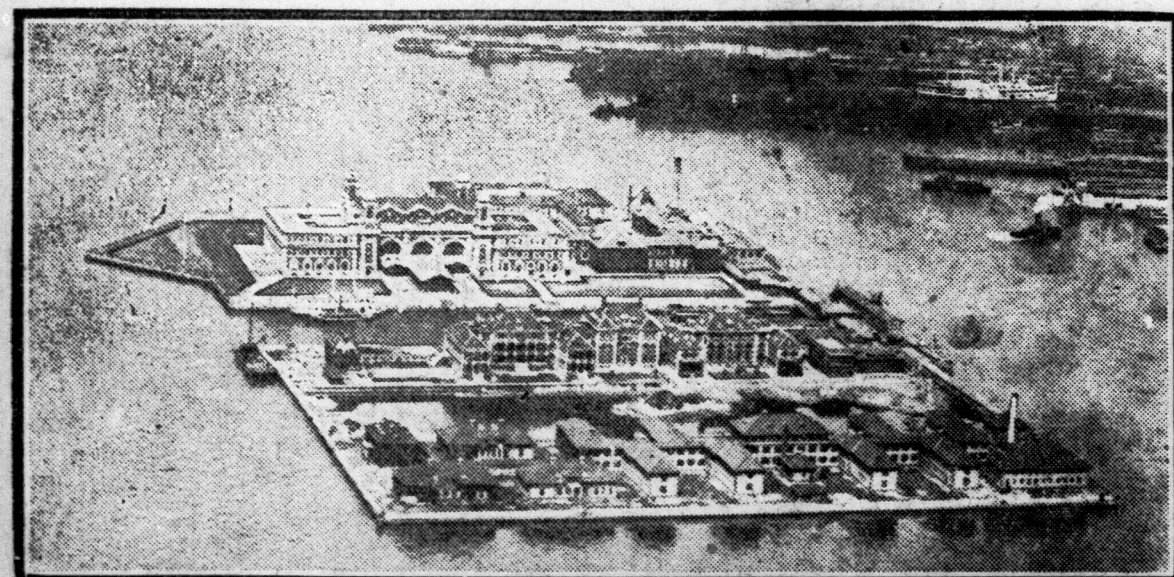

Some Danish boy scouts, who are over in England for a visit, were inspected by Queen Alexandra at Marlborough House. They are seen marching past.

The late Premier Kato of Japan, the news of whose death has followed reports that he was about to resign from office. Since the war he has guided the affairs of Japan.

Taking with them four planes, the navy team of pilots has sailed to represent the United States in the Schneider cup seaplane race off the English coast.

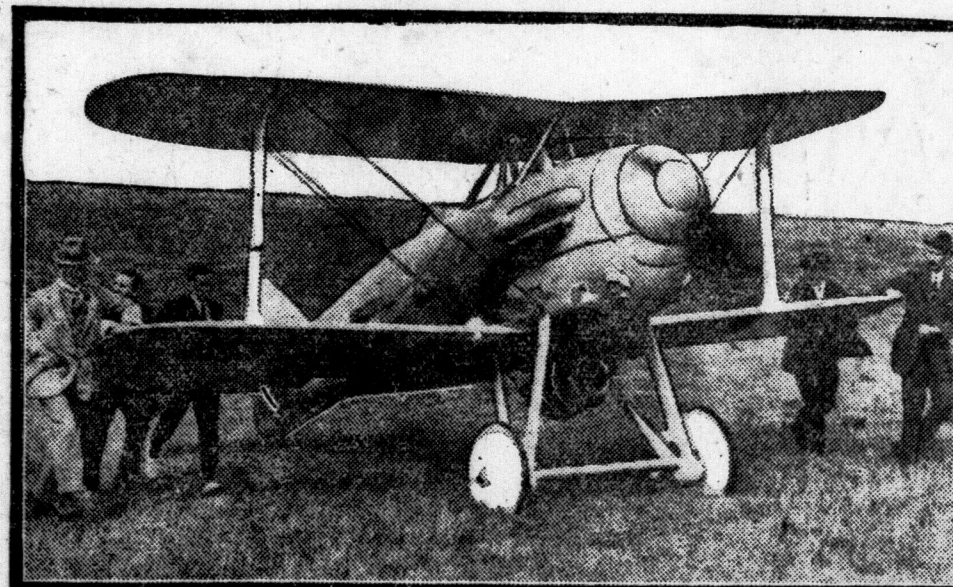

A rather unusual view of Ellis Island taken from the air. Reports have it that this immigration inspection island will be done away with, and instead inspection made in the countries from which the immigrants come.

Portrait of the champion girl cricketer of England. She has taken 62 wickets this season for 262 runs, and in most of her games she is the only woman player.

Gloves such as this are the latest fad in France. The decoration is that of a coil snake made up of hundreds of brilliants and glistening stones.

The eighth aerial derby race round London was decided recently. The photograph shows the winning machine landing after the race.

Now fashion has started the latest creations in fall costumes. This fall costume is pictured for the little miniature lady.