BARK OLIVEBANK REACHES ESQUIMALT

Vessel Which was Gutted by Fire Recently at Santa Rosalia Comes Here for Repairs

Making a splendid picture with the morning sun shining on her spread of canvass as she sailed into the Royal Roads, the British bark Olivebank reached Esquimalt vesterday morning after a fair passage from Santa Rosalia The Olivebank, owned by Andrew Weir & Co., was recently on fire at the Mexican port and was gutted. It has been intended to convert the vessel into a barge, but when the rates for sailing tonnage advanced recently the underwriters sent Capt. W. H. Logan of this city to the Mexican port to arrange a settlement regarding the vessel which was turned over to the owners as a result, and after being temporarily repaired, was sailed to Esquimalt to be urveyed and repaired.

DROWNED FROM FISHING SCHOONER

Vega Returns to Seattle from Cod Fish ing Grounds of Bering Sea After Losing Three men

After one of the slowest passages recorded in many years between the Bering sea codfishing banks and the Puget ound, the cod-fishing schooner Vega eached Seattle on Tuesday. On the Vega's northbound voyage from Seattle in the spring, Gus Sundensen, a young sailor; became insane and hove his shipmates into the rigging. He was finally overpowered, put in irons and put ashore at Unga. About a month later T. Dougherty, nother member of the crew, while siting on a hatch cover rolling a cigarte, was striken with heart failure and ell over dead. Soon after, the Vega enered the Bering sea Hans Larson, a nection with the resumption of that line, has returned home. He states that there is now every probability of the road being restored and operation resumed between Kaslo and Sproules during the present Autumn, thus enabling such ore as is ready for shipment from South Fork and the Utica Mine to' be brought down, and permitting proper-Whitewater, to get in sufficient supplies to enable work to be carried on until Spring, when the balance of the road from Sproules to McGuigan will be in shape for operation.

Accused of Selling Opium

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20 .- Norman B. Smith, a young man who until June of this year was a quartermaster on the freighter Columbian, plying between California and Washington ports and Salina Cruz, Mex., , was arrested here today as he stepped off the steamship Wilhelmina, when she arrived from Honolulu. He is accused of selling opium, and the arrest is the result of a cable warrant from Honolulu. When arrested Smith had a handbag containing $3400 in gold. He reufsed to discuss the affair, but waived all objection to removal to Honolulu, where he is under indictment. By November 1st. steel on the Ket-
