That the "braw Scot" is also "carny it would be idle, at this time, to deny. The latest illustration of this trait in Sawney's character is furnished by a doctor from the land of cakes and ale, who was sojourning in Monte Carlo. He went frequently to the gaming establishments that abound there—not to play, but to look on. Noticing however that some numbers came up more often than others at the roulette up more often than others at the roulette tables, he came to the conclusion that the cylinders must be faulty, and by careful observation he discovered the numbers that came up most frequently during the space of a week at two of the tables. He then constantly backed these numbers, and in three weeks won three million francs. He put the money in his pocket and departed for his native heather, whistling soitly, "Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled."

How Many Times?

How many times of love thee, dear?
Tell me how many thoughts there be
In the autumn atmosphere
Of a new fallen year,
Whose white and sable house appear
The latest fake of eternity;
So many times do I love thee, dear.

How many times do I love thee, again?
Tell me how many beads there are
In a silver chain
Of the evening rain,
Unravelled from the tumbling main
And threading the eye of a yellow star;
So many times do I love again.
