BASEBALL IN WINTER.

ARRANGEMENTS IN PROGRESS FOR THE SEASON OF 1886.

This is the same them inclined to the control of the property for the summer campaign. The other day

"annually" and "year to year" in various places in the constitution of the American association it was evident that the association was a continuing one. Mr. Rawle contended that the Metropolitan club was a member of the association, and that its membership was valuable because it was entitled to its share of profits of the games played with the other clubs. It had been disfranchised and expelled at a special meeting without charges, notice or trial. The court would disapprove of such sharp practice. After a short consultation Judge Thayer announced the decision of the court. "It seems to the court that in the present condition of the court that in the present condition of this cause a prima facie case has been made out, entitling the plaintiffs to a pre-liminary injunction. Undoubtedly valuable rights are secured by membership in this association. It has never been considered an answer to a bill to restore a complainant to membership in an incorporated association to say that he might have an action of law to recover damages.

Were trying to crowd a week's work into a day. This enterprising firm deserves succased. In fact they are incompany.

Dumas' Liberality. From the Christian Union

The elder Dumas was asked to contribute a louis toward the funeral expenses of a poor huisser or bailiff, "Here are forty francs," said Dumas, "bury two." He was, as everybody knew, most liberal. "I have never refused money to anybody except to my creditors," he would often remark. One day Houssaye was at breakfast with him at Monte Cristo, when an actor's wife poorly attired, but too timid to ask for assistance, called upon Dumas. The latter, understood the situation at once, "My poor child," said he, "the sun is very fierce poor child," said he, "the sun is very fierce just now. How can you walk without a sunshade?" And he slipped a five hundred franc note into the woman's hand, adding: "Go and buy yourself one." As she moved off he concluded merrily: "If you will come and see me on a rainy day I will give you enough to purchase an umbrella."

Theebaw is a stout, young and good looking man of about 30 years, with a weak face. He has not the receding foreshead which has always been a distinctive mark of the descendants of Aloung Pra. Since he has found that he has no reason to fear violence, King Theebaw has recovered his nerve and has displayed a good deal of quiet dignity. Col. Sladen told the king that I was a correspondent of the Times. At the close of the interview I read over my notes through an interpreter to Theebaw, who said that they were correct, "I wish to be kept quiet," he said. "I have given over everything to the English, and I want to be kept quiet," he said. "I have given over everything to the English, and I want to be kept quiet," he said. "I have given over everything to the English, and I want to be kept quiet," he said. "I have given over everything to the English, and I want to be kept quiet," he said.
