Pickled Peaches .- Take one peck of peaches, ripe, but perfectly firm; peel and throw into cold water, to prevent their turning black. For this quantity of fruit, take one quart of best cider vinegar, and two pounds of sugar. When this is boiling, take out as many peaches as will boil without crowding; let them stand on a linen towl for a few moments, for the water to run off. Stick two cloves in each peach, let them boil five minutes, take them out and put them in your glass jars. Put more peaches in the vinegar and continue this until all have been cooked in this way; then pour off the syrup, and scald and skim it, and return to the jars boiling hot. Screw the tops on tightly, and keep in a dark, gool place. If there should not be syrup enough to cover all the peaches, add some more sugar and vinegar, boiling hot.

Patent medicines differ—one has reasonableness, another has not. One has reputation—another has not. One has confidence, born of success-another has only "hopes."

Don't take it for granted that all patent medicines are alike. They are not Let the years of interrupted success and the tens of thousands of cured and happy men and wom-en, place Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discov-ery and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription on the side of the comparison to which they be-And there isn't a state or territory nor hardly a country in the world, whether its people realize it or not, but have men and women in them that're happier because of their discovery and their effects.

Think of this in health. Think of it in sickness. And then think whether you can afford to make the trial if the makers can afford to take the risk to give your money back, as they do, if they do not benefit or cure you.
