The following is told of a Glasgow baillie: In Scottish courts of law, witnesses repeat the oath with the right hand raised. On one occasion, however, the magistrate had a difficulty. "Hold up your right arm," he commanded. "I canna dae't," said the witness. "Why not?" "Got shot in that airm." "Then hold up your left." "Canna dae that ayther—got shot in the ither ane tae." "Then hold up your leg," responded the trate magistrate. "No man can be sworn in this court without holding up something."

At a term of a circuit court held not long since in one of the up-river counties a horse case was on trial, and a well-known horseman was called as witness. Counsel—"Well, sir, you saw this horse?" Witness—"Yes, sir, I—" Counsel—"What did you do?" Witness—"I jest opened his mouth to find out his age, and I sez to him, sez I: 'Old feller, I guess you're purty good yet.'" Opposite Counsel—"Stop! Your honour, I object to any conversation carried on between this witness and the horse when the plaintiff was not present." The objection was sustained.

Littell's Living Age is appropriately named. It is a true representation of "the living age"—the vast complexity of thoughts, interests, aims, speculations, imaginations, knowledges, retrospections, of the contemporary world.

Its weekly, issues for September, among other excellent papers, contain the following: "A Visit to Prince Bismarck," by Geo. W. Smalley; "A Group of Naturalists," by Mrs. Andrew Crosse: "Amelia Opie"; "A French Study of Burns"; "The Religion of Letters, 1750-1850": "Reminiscences of William Makepeace Thackeray," by Francis St. John Thackeray: "Chapters from Some Unwritten Memoirs—Mrs. Kemble," by Annie Ritchie; "The Fetish-Mountain of Krobo," by Hesketh J. Bell; "The Lives and Loves of North American Birds," by John Worth; "The Wanderings of the North Pole," by Sir Robert S. Ball; "The Abbe Gregoire and the French Revolution"; "Ethics and the Struggle for Existence," by Leslie Stephen; "Whitlocke's Swedish Embassy," by Chaples Edwardes; "Old-Fashioned Children," by Frederic Adye, etc., besides several delightful short stories by such noted writers as Augustus Jessopp, Lucy Clifford, Edward Laws, etc., and some excellent poetry.

A new volume, the 199th of this brilliant weekly, begins with the issue of October 7th, No. 2570, affording a very favourable opportunity to subscribe. The subscription price, $8, for the amount of reading furnished, is low, while for $10.50 the publishers offer to send any one of the American $4 monthlies or weeklies with The Living Age for a year, both prepaid. Send 15 cents for a specimen copy and club rates with other magazines. Published by Littell & Co., Boston.