

The outstanding ability of Dr. Reeve was thus recognized in many parts of the world, and one might wonder how such achievements might be attained, yet leaving ample time for the many social, religious and progressive activities which ever formed a part of his busy life. The University Senate, the Medical Council and the profession ever counselled his services and co-operation, but possibly to no section did Dr. Reeve become so endeared as to the medical students who knew him as their Dean, and whose memories will constantly be reminded of his loyal friendship and guidance. It may be that after a long and distinguished period of service, this able man desired that such a career might be terminated while yet glowing, and if this be the case, Dr. Reeve had his wish. It was a great shock to his host of friends to learn that he suddenly passed away in Toronto on January 27th, last, at midnight, while returning from an evening's engagement which was occupied in thoughts for others. Again quoting from Colonel I. H. Cameron, "A unique personality has passed from among us, and if virtue be the embodiment of 'all that may become a man,' then Vir virtute praeditus hesterno die abiit ad plures."
