

PRESS NOTICES

OF THE

MOST RECENT NUMBERS OF THE "PRESENT DAY TRACTS."

No. 69. Modern Scepticism Compared with Christian Faith. By the Rev. M. KAUFMANN, M.A. 4d.

"One of the most interesting of the series of Present Day Tracts In general ability, and in the skill with which it presses modern literature into the service of the argument, the present Tract is certainly inferior to none of its predecessors, so far as they have come beneath our notice."

Record.

"A forcible appeal to sceptics. The charm of this little book is the sweetness of its spirit. Instead of denouncing the doubter it pleads with him on the ground that a 'convinced doubter makes the best believer.' Let it be scattered broadcast among young men."—Baptist.

"The Tract is . . . up to date, and skilful in dealing with the data furnished by the modern infidelity which saturates popular literature. It cannot fail to command respect, even from opponents."—Rock.

No. 70. The Problem of Human Suffering in the Light of Christianity. By the Rev. T. STERLING BERRY, D.D. 4d.

"To say that it is quite worthy of the series is to give it the highest commendation; for former issues have been of priceless value. We wish that every minister, teacher, and church member would read these sterling pamphlets. They would utterly nullify the fashionable infidelity that thinks itself to have the monopoly of brains to-day. Worth many times its nominal cost; indeed, cannot be valued in silver and gold."—Word and Work.

"This Tract is at once a splendid apologetic for the doubter and a healing balm for the sorrowing. It is as clear in stating the difficulty as in explaining it. Its reasoning is sound, and its philosophy is Christian and humanitarian."—The Rock.

"Dr. Berry shows, in his lucid manner, that neither in the teaching of Buddha or of Zeno of old, nor yet in the teaching of the modern Pessimist is found any satisfactory solution of this difficult problem, but that a solution can be found in the light of Christianity only."—Sheffield Independent.

No. 71. The "Psalms of David" and Modern Criticism. By the Rev. SAMUEL G. GREEN, D.D. 4d.

"We commend this little work to our young friends. All our ministers ought to read it. It is time some check was put to the fashionable guarded eulogies on the higher criticism uttered in ignorance of what it really is. Most heartily do we thank Dr. Green, not only for the work, but because he has so condensed the instruction that it could be published in a cheap form."

Freeman.

"This Tract, short as it is, is a very complete and exhaustive argument in favour of the Davidic authorship of the Psalms. . . The argument is stated in a clear and telling manner. The references to authorities are many. It is a fine apologetic."—Rock.
